POLICE WATCH FOR TROY AT BURIAL OF PAL DEROSIER

Expect 12 Indictments in Mackinac Case

Guns and Dogs Guard Vamped Collar King

New York, Aug. 24 (A.P.).—As the result of what he regards as attempts by women to lure him, and other plots against him, Max Phillips, wealthy collar manufacturer and polo player, is being closely guarded on his 700-acre estate near Eatontown, N. J.

Eight armed detectives are on guard. Phillips carries a pistol. Watchdogs give warning if a stranger approaches.

Meanwhile three women, presumably detectives, and a male detective are out on bail after being arrested on Phillips's complaint. The purpose of the plot, he says, is to weaken his control of the Phillips-Jones Company, which makes Van Heusen collars. The hounding has persisted for months at the instigation of a New York banker he says.

TRIP TO N. E. PLANNED.

Public attention to Phillips' trouble first developed over the week-end when the arrests were revealed. The charges against the three women and the major vary from conspiracy to carrying concealed weapons. The women were arrested on his estate Friday night after detectives in his employ had listened to his conversation with them by means of a telephonic device.

He says the women tried to lure him aboard a yacht and take a trip to New England with the intention of having him arrested for violation of the Mann Act. One of the women posed as a Countess and one as her maid.

Frank H. Berg, head of his own detective agency, who was arrested near the estate, is out with a statement that the whole thing is a publicity melodrama.

"I cannot see however, that this publicity will assist his collar business," Berg said. "It certainly won't alter the standing Phillips achieved through newspaper accounts of his divorce case in which he was quoted

SUSPECT HELD AS 'DUTCH' ANDERSON

Montreal, Aug. 24 (A. P.).—The local police have in custody a man whose facial characteristics are declared to resemble those of "Dutch" Anderson, who is charged with having shot and killed Mr. and Mrs. Ben Hance near Muncie, Ind., recently.

The man under detention was arrested in Drummondville and turned over to the Montreal authorities. They have taken his fingerprints and forwarded them to the authorities south of the Canadian border.

The man arrived in Drummondville last Thursday and applied to the police for aid. He was accommodation, but on being turned out the next day he started to beg and was arrested.

The police then were struck by what they declared to be a resemblance between the man's features and photographs of "Dutch" Anderson which have been circulated throughout Canada. They at once turned him over to the metropolitan police, who have sent a complete description of him to the United States.

DEATH SHIP PURSER IS STATE WITNESS; U. S. PROBE GOES ON

Providence, R. I., Aug. 24.—Indictment of at least 12 persons in connection with the Steamship Mackinac disaster, off Coddington Point, Newport, are expected following completion of the State's formal probe of the catastrophe to the "Patched-Up Tub of Pawtucket," which opened today in the office of the attorney-general.

Scores of witnesses have been summoned by Asst. Atty. Gen. Oscar L. Heitzen, who is directing the State's prode of the disaster which has resulted in the deaths of 50 persons to date.

Federal investigation into the explosion who resumed in the Federal building with Purser John Pierce, of the Mackinac as the first witness. Others summoned for questioning today are employes of the Wholey Boiler Works, whose affidavits charging Chief Engineer John Grant with sailing before repairs were made to a leak in the boiler, and with full knowledge that the boiler might explode, were given publicity by Asst. Atty. Gen. Heitzen.

With the death toll already at fifty, five more victims of the explosion remain in a critical condition in U. S. the Naval and Newport General Hospitals.

John Wildenhaim and Virginia Troeger two children among the five have contracted scarlet fever according to hospital physicians.

Churches throughout the Blackston Valley were crowded with mourning thousands as funerals of the explosion victims took place. As the toll of bells died away, priests and ministers sought to comfort the relatives and friends of those who died in the disaster.

Two Pawtucket victims were laid in cemeteries. Peter Borsay, a policeman, and Martha S. McClelland, 13, of Smithfield avenue Pawtucket. The McClelland girl's funeral was especially pathetic. Her excursion trip on the Mackinac was the first she had ever taken on a steamboat. She tried to persuade her mother to come but failed. So she went with a girl friend, Amelia Palmer, who was also killed. Weeping relatives and friends crowded about the casket, sobbed during the

LOFT THIEVES GET 45 GOWNS WORTH $2,637

Working in broad daylight, loft thieves smashed their way into Rose A. Radlo's exclusive hat and gown shop at No. 589 Boylston street and decamped with forty-five dresses worth $2637.)

It was the first loft job of the late Summer and early Fall season.

At the Back Bay station, Acting Captain Francis Mulligan told reporters he had nothing to give out, as his sleuths were still investigating. Later it was ascertained that the station had made a detailed report to Superintendent Crowley, even listing the gowns stolen and describing their color and texture.

For some reason, the police are convinced the break was achieved at 9 o'clock Sunday morning. In view of the secrecy they have built around the job it is impossible to say why. It is understood, however, that dresses worth thousands of dollars were found piled up, ready to be taken away, when the police got on the scene.

One fact may be stated without qualification. There has been no arrests at noon today, twenty-seven hours afterward.

DRINKS POISON AFTER SPAT WITH HUSBAND

Despondent on account of a quarrel with her husband, Joseph Morelli, of No. 10 Whenley avenue, Medford, Mary Morelli, twenty-seven, drank an ounce of poison. Mrs. Morelli was taken to the Lawrence Memorial Hospital, Medford, where it was found that though she suffered severe burns in the mouth and throat, she was not in danger.

SCOTT AGAIN FACES NOOSE

Chicago, Aug. 24 (A. P.).—The Chicago Herald and Examiner says it has learned that Russell T. Scott, convicted murderer of Joseph Maurer, has been found sane and probably will be returned to Cook County from Chester to face the gallows once more within the next thirty days.

The newspaper says that news that an informal decision that Scott is not a lunatic has been made by Dr. Frank A. Stubblefield and has been received by the office of the State's attorney, Crowe, it was revealed by a member of Mr. Crowe's staff.

Dr. Stubblefield, is superintendent of the State Hospital for the Insane at Chester, Illinois, and according to the Herald and Examiner's account, he awaits only the corroborution of his decision by two consultant experts, to return Scott to Sheriff Peter Hoffman for hanging.

Under the commitment papers, Superintendent Stubblefield of the Chester asylum was ordered to confine Scott until he dies or until he is found sane.

2 PATROLMEN ARE 'FIRED'

Following the findings of a trial board of three captains, before whom the two policemen appeared to answer charges last week, Patrolmen Walter Walsh and Joseph Curry, both of the Hanover street police station, were dismissed from the force today at roll-call.

Walsh, in the charges against him, was accused of having accosted two young women in the company of two taxicab drivers in the vicinity of the North Station and of having declared in the presence of all four that the chauffeurs were guilty of an attack upon their young woman companions. Later Walsh was alleged to have made overtures to "fix" the alleged attack with the sum of $50 each from the taxicab drivers.

On the same day Walsh met Curry and talked matters over with him and Curry was charged with having left his post of duty to accompany Walsh to the home of one of the chauffeurs and of there having made improper remarks to the man's wife.

Curry, during the pending of these charges against him, is alleged to have approached Lieutenant Welsh of the Roxbury Crossing station and to have asked him to "say a good word for me" to Captain Grant, one of the three members of the trial board.

Both officers have three days from the promulgation of the order for their dismissal, in which to request a public hearing.

ARMED COPS KEEP VIGIL AT FUNERAL FOR THUGS' LEADER

Worcester, Aug. 24.—With scores of heavily armed plainclothesmen mingling in the throng, the funeral of "Wally" Derosier, lieutenant of Johnny Troy, Worcester's notorious boy thug, took place today.

Even in death Derosier was an object of interest to the police, for it was expected that Troy, who has outwitted hundreds of officers, would pay a final tribute to his pal by attending the services.

Therefore, the police were on hand, resolved to capture or slit the young gang leader, who for more than two weeks has terrorized the Blackstone Valley and flouted the authorities.

To the police, Walter Derosier was a thug of the most dangerous type, shot down by a courageous officer while attempting an armed hold-up.

To the weeping, gray-haired mother, Mrs. Katherine Derosier, he was only "Wally," her oldest boy, killed in a dreadful death.

MOTHER MOANS IN GRIEF

"He was always such a good boy," she moaned, as the casket was borne from the vine-covered cottage at No. 5 Howker street. "We gave him the best home we could—let him have everything he wanted. He was my first boy.

"Sometimes I almost prayed that they'd bring him back to me like this—dead. Then, at least, I'd know where Wally was and that he wasn't doing any more terrible things."

Six year old Ernest, convinced now that "Wally's not coming home," bravely swallowed his grief and attempted to cheer his mother.

WATCH FOR THUG LEADER IN FLAPPER GARB AT PAL'S BURIAL

HUNDREDS OF POLICE ON GUARD

"Don't cry, Mother," he said with his stuttering. "I'll take care of you."

Seated nearby, her face stained with tears, was bob-haired Edith Derosier, Wally's pretty little sister, and her brother Raymond. Edith was enjoying her vacation when news of her brother's killing reached her.

PRIEST'S HOME GUARDED.

With stony face, dry-eyed and motionless, the father, Philip Derosier, sat with bowed shoulders, staring at the floor.

A motorcycle patrol held the street in front of the Derosier house, while in each of the dwellings on the right and left, two plain-clothes men were stationed.

Adjacent streets were lined with uniformed officers, while a police lieutenant stood guard over the casket from an early hour today until it was lowered in a lonely grave in an unconsecrated plot of ground in Notre Dame Cemetery on the banks of French Pond.

Automobiles of the mourners were backed to the curb in front of the Derosier house, forming a solid block of machines, apparently designed to prevent the photographers from making pictures of their inmates.

At the same time, but a short distance away, another force of heavily armed officers guarded the home of the Rev. John J. Lunney, pastor of St. Stephen's Church. The guard was furnished because of a death threat, alleged to have been made by Troy, because of the priest's refusal to permit the burial of Derosier from the church.

Still other police and State constabulary, mounted on motorcycles and in automobiles, scoured the highways in the hope of encountering the gang leader.

Young women in automobiles were closely scanned, as a result of a report that Troy had masqueraded as a blonde flapper. According to this report the youth has equipped himself with two outfits of women's clothing with which to fool the police.

IN BLONDE WIG.

He is said to have appeared recently in a bobbed blonde wig, with shell glasses, wearing a dark red and green skirt and a snappy turban.

Troy early today motored into the heart of the city through heavily armed men seeking his life, and later, accompanied by one of his gang, visited a restaurant on the outskirts. Recognized by a waiting man, Troy insolently flipped cigarette ashes at him, threw himself a glass of water and with his companion disappeared in a big sedan.

The proprietor of the place and others present failed to take cognizance of Troy's presence. He was, as usual, nattily attired and he was cool and deliberate in his actions as he ordered and ate a light lunch.

ASHES SPILLED ON COAT.

When he turned slowly to confront the salesman acquaintance he was bold and defiant. He stood a pace away from the salesman, looked him over from head to foot with sarcastic glance.

Then raising a finger to a cigarette which he held in his right hand he flicked the ashes towards the salesman spilling ashes over the front of the latter's coat.

Realizing his dangerous position, the salesman, who was unarmed, turned away white Troy nodding to his companion and newest recruit filled and drank a glass of water and then calmly walked out of the restaurant.

Without a glance to the right or left of him Troy seated himself in the new Packard car and with his new pal at the wheel drove away from the place.

CALL HEADQUARTERS.

Five minutes later the salesman notified police headquarters.

Emergency calls were sent out to all patrolmen and reserves were aroused from their sleep to assist in the new hunt.

Fifty men who were combing the downtown district at daybreak were reinforced after morning roll-call by 100 men in uniform and plain clothes.

Confidence that the bandit leader is in the city was further strengthened when a taxi driver, who asked that his name be kept secret, raced to police headquarters with the information that he had driven Troy and a companion, answering the description of Britt, from the railroad station to Dorchester street, but restrained from summoning a policeman for fear of being murdered in the attempt at capture.

Because the Troy home is on Dorchester street, together with the fact that a member of the Troy family warned the police of the insistence of the young gunman to take one last look at his dead pal, some time after midnight, the police believe that Troy visited his home and informed his family of his plans.

NECESSARY? IF NOT, DON'T!

This little disc around the mouthpiece of the telephones is expected to prove one of the most effective weapons in the crusade of the people against the telephone rate grab. It is constantly on guard cautioning the public not to use the phone unless it's necessary. It threatens to keep some of the phone company's embryonic dividends in the public's pockets.

HUNDREDS SIGN PETITIONS IN 'PHONE WAR

A bill providing for popular election of the members of the Public Utilities Commission has been filed with the Attorney-General by Charles A. Coughlin of Medford.

Mr. Coughlin formerly served on the Medford Board of Aldermen and has long been prominent in fighting for lower gas rates, no increase in railroad fares and a better deal generally from the public utilities corporations.

Always a believer in popular election of the commissioners who have the last word when such fares or rates are under discussion, he determined to act when the Department of Public Utilities granted the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company an $8,460,000 "bonus" in the form of increased rates.

WOMEN ANSWER "CALL."

The Boston Evening American's spirited fight against that gigantic grab played a part in inspiring him to move.

The Attorney-General will be asked to pass upon the constitutionality of the bill and make any suggestions that seem wise to him. When the bill is returned to Mr. Coughlin, he will immediately file it with the legislative clerks, and will then begin to agitate for early and favorable action on it.

One way or retaliating for the exorbitant telephone rates has been suggested by the Boston Liberator Print Unc., which is distributing pasteboard disks which fit around the mouthpiece of a telephone, and upon which there is printed a warning cautioning all users of the phone to consider well the necessity of a call they might be contemplating.

The company has installed them on its phones and is now urging their installation on all phones.

MANY SIGN UP

Only the opposition to what is termed as "highway robbery" by the housewives of Greater Boston is increasing, with leading citizens and public officials taking up the "call to arms" in a public spirited manner.

The Revere women, led by Mrs. Lucy Fearlmutter, President of the League of Women Voters of Revere, and Mrs. Beale Jacobs of No. 39 Nahant avenue, following the initiative of Ralph H. Taylor, well-known attorney of Haverhill, who suggests that the residents of Massachusetts have their phones removed, are canvassing Revere and surrounding communities with the same object in mind.

With the new move on their part, agitating the removal of telephones from all places where it is not absolutely essential, the Revere women declare that they have met with exceedingly good success.

Even many professional people to whom a phone is almost a matter of life and death to their business have agreed to its removal when the time comes, Mrs. Jacobs said.

"Although I am going to have my phone removed by the first of the month," she asserted, "I will still keep up my fight against the extortionate rates now in force."

"HIGHWAY ROBBERY"

That is what the housewives of Greater Boston and the State call the new schedule of increased rates granted the telephone company. Fight the injustice and rebuke the Public Utilities Commission by signing this petition and thus register your personal protest.

TELEPHONE PETITION

TO GOVERNOR FULLER:

We, the undersigned, subscribers of the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company, voice our protest against the increase of rates for telephone service as granted by the Public Utilities Commission of Massachusetts, and petition that the former schedule of rates be restored immediately.

200-Lb. Canoeist Saved by Small Companion

Samuel Stovel, 23, No. 185 Essex street, Malden, and Herman Williams, 18, No. 82 Clark avenue, Chelsea, narrowly escaped drowning when their canoe tipped over on the Charles river just below Norumbega Park. Stovel, who weighs over 200 pounds and is unable to swim, was saved through the efforts of Williams, who is small and can swim only a few strokes.

Stovel had gone down twice, and Williams' strength was failing when William Elliott of the Metropolitan district police, arrived in a small rowboat. He filled his boat half full of water in pulling Stovel over the side, and then the half-fainting Williams.

ANTHRACITE OPPONENTS HAVE QUIET WEEK-END

Philadelphia, Aug. 24 (A.P.).—Miners and operators gave tongues and pens a rest over the week-end which passed without public developments in the deadlock existing in anthracite negotiations.

Pleading apprehension expressed itself in words only in Wilkesbarre, where the Anthracite Business Men's Association passed another resolution decrying the possibility of a suspension in mine operations and delegated certain of its members to confer with leaders of the opposing forces.

as saying that he would rather have a good polo pony than a wife.

BIG-FOOTED "JUNO."

"Isn't it absurd to think that women crafty enough to engage in such conspiracies would pick Mr. Phillips for a violation of the Mann Act?"

Phillips was divorced seven years ago.

Berg denied his agency was being paid by a banker. He said he was employed for a purpose by no means hostile to Phillips.

Phillips played polo on his private field. Asked whether he was worried by the possibility of the presence of foes he said: "They wouldn't dare to come out in these open spaces."

A heavily veiled woman with abnormally large feet and hands eluded the guards sufficiently to approach Phillips.

"I am sure she was a man," Phillips said after detectives had hustled her out of the house. "She had the largest hands and feet I ever saw. She was most unsightly and wore a scarlet veil. She kept roaming around.

"It was lucky detectives were with me or I might have been shot on the spot."

Mrs. Margaret Campbell, a New York spiritualist, was also dragged into the plots, Phillips said, in order to give the impression that he was a spiritualist and attended seances.

He said a woman had lured him to Mrs. Campbell's home. While he was there the police arrested her and summoned him to appear as a witness against her.

He has failed to appear in court on two occasions.

UNDER MANY A 'SHINGLE BOB' IS 'LEAKY ROOF'

So Declares Preacher in Sermon; Most Folks Today Want Only Thrills

Worcester, Aug. 24.—"Many a shingle bob," say the Rev. W. W. Bustard, for many years pastor of the Euclid Ave. Baptist Church, "covers a leaky roof."

Dr. Bustard made this remark among others during the course of a sermon at the Old South Congregational Church here. He further declared that a woman's long hair was once her crowning glory. It's now the short bob.

The eminent minister told his congregation that what people want most nowadays is thrills. They care but little for the matters spiritual. They seek the thrill in the movie, in sports and at the circus and they even look for it in the church, he declared.

"There is too much tendency today," continued Dr. Bustard, to get away from the spiritual, too much tendency toward the physical. There is too much thought giving to physical things and too little to spiritual things.

"What does the average woman thing most of? I venture a guess that many a woman pays much more attention to her physical appearance than to the welfare of her soul. I do not want to talk much about woman's clothes; there is not much to talk about."

The two, with two other sailors from the Roe, William Deets of Fresno City, Mo., and Francis Moss of Fall River, Mass., were on their way to Ocean Beach when Deets, the driver, lost control of the machine and it crashed into a tree. Deets and Moss were not injured.

Deets is being held on a charge of reckless driving and Moss as a material witness.

EXPERT RATES ALL CRIMINALS AS INSANE

Permanent Isolation on Farms Suggested by Chicago Criminologist

An offer to rid any large city of all criminal offenders of the type of John Troy and members of his fugitive Worcester gang, is made by Dr. William J. Hickson, director of the psychological laboratory connected with the municipal court of Chicago.

In announcing his offer Dr. Hickson says:

"Instead of committing offenders to prison and reformatories for short periods and then throwing them on society again to permit a greater crime permanently on industrial farms where they could live their lives amid surroundings adjusted to their peculiarities.

"At present the law presumes the criminal to be sane until proven insane. When recent studies in criminology are incorporated into the criminal code of the United States, every criminal will be presumed insane until he proves himself sane.

"The mentally deficient repeaters are responsible for virtually all vicious crimes, such as murders, robberies, bank hold-ups and criminal attacks on women."

Legislation to provide such a colony as Dr. Hickson proposes has been prepared by a volunteer committee of civic leaders for the Legislature.

While standing in Washington street, opposite School street, Dorchester, waiting for a street car, Walter Guild, 30 years old, of No. 31 Lyman terrace, Dorchester, was struck by a wheel which had flown from a passing automobile. Guild was taken to City Hospital where his injuries were said to be serious.

The machine, owned and operated by Nicholas Trent, 36, of No. 16 Allston street, Dorchester, continued for 250 feet after losing the wheel, which came from the left rear axle.

FIRE CHIEF LOSES LIFE BY DROWNING

Vineyard Haven, Aug. 24.—The body of Lester H. Bumpus, 35, fire chief, who was washed overboard from the "Jazz," a high-powered speed boat, was recovered after an all-night search conducted by wealthy summer residents here, the coast guard and a dragnet.

The young man, it is said, did not meet death by drowning, but was killed by the propeller of the boat as it swung around to assist the youthful guests who had been swept into the ocean.

Wooden Leg Is Blamed for Causing Fire

A wooden leg started a $1,000 fire in Chelsea.

Ernest Taylor, a lodger in the home of Harry Taylor at No. 148 Chestnut street, at least blames the leg, and being its owner ought to know about it.

Ernest was looking for something in the closet of his room with a kerosene lamp in one hand when his leg gave way. The ensuing flames did $500 worth of damage to the furnishings and $500 to the house, which is owned by Solomon Rose of No. 51 Franklin avenue, Chelsea. The fire department put the blaze out in the approved manner.

who would be selected by pretty Geraldine as her husband.

TOSSED AWAY TITLES.

European titles galore were tossed at her feet; young sons of American and European multi-millionaires have sought her favor; artists raved over her rare type of beauty and personality.

In 1921 she was engaged to Whitney Warren Jr., son of the noted New York architect. But something went amiss, and it was announced the engagement was discontinued "by mutual consent."

Since, scores of young men have besieged the heart of the statuesque lover of the Golden State.

The introduction of "Charley" Dabney into Santa Barbara society spelled "finis" for the horde of suitors surrounding the wealthy young beauty.

It was soon realized that young Dabney had the "inside track" in the race for Miss Graham's hand. They were seen together constantly.

GOSSIPS BUZZ.

Announcement of their engagement was not surprising.

Santa Barbara society shook its head, however, and recalled the outcome of her affair with young Warren of New York.

But the happy young couple, entirely oblivious of gossip, went gayly down the road that leads to the altar.

Mrs. Graham, the bride's mother, met and married William Miller Graham when the latter was just starting in the oil business. She was a Kentucky girl, not "too proud to work."

It was in the boarding house which she operated that Mrs. Graham was wooed and won by the man who later acquired a fortune estimated at $60,000,000.

Mrs. Isora Gustin of North Braintree and Mrs. Henry T. Cushing of Milton Hills, N. H., were thrown from the car. The former suffered a fractured elbow and scalp wounds and Mrs. Cushing was shaken up. Smith is survived by a widow and two daughters.

Joseph P. Keely, 28, No. 8 Hillside avenue, Brighton, and Edward F. Cook, same address, are in St. Elizabeth's Hospital. Three escaped death in a Webster accident when the automobile driven by Ralph Holley hit a watering trough and turned over. The three occupants were thrown from the car. Mr. Holley was treated for body lacerations and cuts.

BRITISH SEAMEN'S STRIKE SERIOUS IN AUSTRALIA

London, Aug. 14.—Although the seamen's strike apparently was collapsing in England, the situation is serious in Australia where ten British ships are said up for lack of crews. Conditions in the ports of the British Isles were normal today. There was not even picketing. Strike leaders, however, predicted the tie up in England would be general before Wednesday. "There will not be a single liner moving out of Southampton at the end of the week," they declared.

SHACKLED MAN TO DRIVE 120 HOURS

State Police Now in Control at Ashburnham

WILL DRIVE HUB CAR 5 DAYS

Sarg Cole Starts Wednesday on Endurance Test Chained to Auto; No Food, No Sleep

In manacles and irons Sarg Cole will attempt to drive an automobile through the streets of Boston and its suburbs for 120 hours without sleep or substantial food other than ice cream. Cole will in unth be a voluntary prisoner within his coach from 12:15 noon Wednesday until the same hour Monday, one week from today.

Boston and New England has never witnessed so exacting a test of the human body as is arranged for this affair. The Boston Evening American, in arranging it, decided upon something novel and interesting for its readers. And, as is always the case, the American has secured the best possible stunt.

ONLY ICE CREAM

True, Cole won't be buried alive or anything like that, but withal his being handcuffed into the car with nothing to nourish him aside from ice cream will be almost as trying as were the days Floyd Collins spent in his sepulchral cavern in Kentucky last spring.

But Cole will hardly die as a result of the test. The minute he gives any indication of being at the point of collapse steps will be taken to prevent his continuing the test. Sarg Cole is a giant of a man. They call him the Canadian Iron Man, and a glimpse at his record of accomplishments along such lines as this which the Boston Evening American is promoting would indicate that he is truly a man of iron.

POLICE AS CHECKERS

This test will have more or less of an official tinge to it. This tings will come through the fact that members of the police department will be asked to act somewhat after the idea of checkers during the long night hours when there will not be so many abroad to observe the driver in action.

Cole will stop from time to time during the night, when he encounters police officers and take their names and numbers. He will ask that the officers make a note of the fact they met him, that he was awake, manacled and still driving.

Thus the test will be more or less closely observed. Then in addition it may be that Superintendent Crowley will order the officers to observe Cole closely. They will be told to notice whether or not exhaustion is coming over him.

For it is to be appreciated that were he to become exhausted and collapse while driving a car he might become a menace to pedestrains and other automobilists as well. And if that should come to pass the officers may be instruct to force Cole to relinquish his control of the car.

Winthrop square, directly in front of the office of the Boston Evening American will be the start and finish line of the test. It is expected that a person prominent in official circles

MANACLED AUTOIST PLANS TEST

Sarg Cole, called "the Canadian Iron Man," at noon Wednesday will start an 120-hour tour of the streets of Boston and suburbs manacled in a closed car. Foregoing sleep his only substantial food will be ice cream. While Bostonians sleep police officers will keep a check on this daring motorist. To the right is a close up of Cole and above is the Essex coach he will use in the test.

150 KLANSMEN AT GARDNER FUNERAL

Gardner, Aug. 24.—Robed but unmasked members of the Ku Klux Klan added funerals to the list of their activities when about 150 of them attended the funeral of Henry W. Russell here.

As the corege entered the cemetery the Klansmen joined the line and stood while the Rev. P. J. McInnes, Universalist pastor, and the Red Men conducted the services.

Following the benediction a Klansman sounded "taps" and the others knelt in prayer. Two stood up and removed an American flag from the casket, after which they marched out of the cemetery in orderly file.

FIGHT AGAINST FILM BOYCOTT IS PLANNED

New Haven, Ct., Aug. 24 (A. P.)—Connecticut theatre owners, meeting here, voiced a vigorous protest against the threatened boycott on motion picture films against this State by the National Producers and distributors in their fight against the new motion picture tax law which recently was declared constitutional by Federal court judges. They were unanimous in their sentiment that Connecticut theatre owners do not want a boycott as an instrument to fight the new law.

Not only will the State exhibitors refuse to waive contract rights on films, but they will fight to prevent producers and distributors declaring a boycott, it was said.

Mlle Gade is pretty, blonde and a native of Denmark. She is employed as swimming instructor by the naval militia.

'MADE' PHOTO CAUSES MAN'S ARREST

Drawing upon his powers of resource, developed while he was engaged as a reporter on a Boston newspaper, Charles E. Folsom of District Attorney Arthur Reading's staff, "manufactured" a photogrpah of an alleged murderer sought for six years, and as a result, Giuseppe Capolli, was arrested and will soon stand trial in Middlesex Superior Court.

Capolli is charged with the slaying of Rosario Buscemi in Maynard after a running gun fight in the streets of the town on the night of June 15, 1919. Carmello Spiro, another youth, was indicted in connection with the murder. He is now serving a sentence in State prison.

Capolli fled and all efforts to locate him were fruitless. Police failed to find a photograph of the fugitive. But it was learned that he closely resembled one of his sisters. A picture of this girl was taken to a newspaper office by Folsom.

A copy was made by a cameraman and an artist then drew a head of hair, moustache, collar, tie and coat over the photograph of the girl.

Copies were sent all over the country.

Detective Giordano of the Hamilton avenue, New York, station with this picture as a guide, arrested Capolli at the funeral of a relative and the alleged murderer readily admitted his identity.

BLACKETT FUNERAL IN BOSTON; BODY ON WAY

Funeral arrangements for William Cameron Blackett are incomplete, pending arrival here of the body from Chicago, where a minstep sent the widely known Boston business man, former soldier and Harvard graduate to his death beneath the wheels of a rapidly moving train of the Chicago and North Shore Electric Railway at Central station, Wilmette.

In Chicago on business, Mr. Blackett was on his way to pay a Sunday visit at the home of Neil M. Clark. Membership cards of the Harvard Club, Boston City Club and the Chamber of Commerce identified the body.

POLICE ARE OUSTED; CHIEF DENIES WRONG

Ashburnham, Aug. 24.—State troopers today are policing this town, while excitement continus at fever height, being stimulated by the denial of Chief & Police Elmer W. Russell and the counter charges of State offeers concerning the spectacular raid on the Bay State Club in South Ashburnham.

Chief Russell and three of his lieutenants stand suspended by the selectmen based on charges of laxity in enforcing laws, particularly those concerning liquor and gambling violations.

Vigorous denial is made by the chief that he was "arrested" in the gambling raid by the State officers who insist that the chief was holding "hand" in a card game and that he pocketed some good United States currency when the game was interrupted.

ENDED SUNDAY MORNING

The raids began at 10:30 Saturday night and were concluded at 3 o'clock Sunday morning. Eight places were visited. Eleven warrants were served. Four men were arrested and taken to Fitchburg for hearings on gambling and liquor charges. According to the authorities, 27 additional warrants will be served today.

So secret were the plans for the raids and so swiftly did the officers work that the local police knew nothing of the coup until it was all over.

FITCHBURG POLICE AID.

State Officer Charles P. Davis, with six other police and Sergeant W. W. Wallace of the Fitchburg police and four Fitchburg officers were in the raiding party. Cards, a slot machine, other gaming implements, as well as beer and alleged liquor, it was reported, were seized.

The visitatio to the Bay State Club was well after midnight. There, according to the police, Chief Russell sat in at a game in which money was the stake and at which a tally sheet was being kept. The police chief, according to the raiders, seized the money and thrust it in his pocket.

Chief Russell, however, declared that there was no gambling at the club and that the game was but a friendly game of cards with no money as stakes.

The selectmen, however, said the raids were the work of a long investigation, and a desire to "clean up the town," which they said had been "wide open."

David Dineen, four-year-old son of Harry A. Dineen, of No. 11 Andrews street, this city, may lose the sight of one of his eyes as the result of being struck by a baseball while watching a game with his father at Curtis Park, Revere. The little fellow was sitting on the grass watching the players when a bounding ball struck him with great force in the right eye. He was rushed to the Chelsea Memorial Hospital and later transferred to the Massachusetts General Hospital.

RECEIVES VERDICT OF JURY CALMLY

Dorothy Ellingson of San Francisco, convicted of shooting her mother to death last January, was unaffected when the jury returned a verdict of manslaughter, saying that it was about what she expected. The young matricide is to be sentenced Wednesday.

San Francisco, Aug. 24.—"Oh, I'm not complaining. It isn't so bad, and it isn't so different from what I expected. I'm not grieving over the verdict."

This was Dorothy Ellingson talking after having been found guilty of manslaughter for having shot her mother early last January.

Dorothy's attitude was even more expressive than hey words. She appeared light-hearted and from all outward appearances was once again the carefree "jazz" girl, whose wild parties finally landed her before the bar of justice.

California's only matricide will be sentenced next Wednesday morning by Superior Court Judge Harold Louderback. The penalty is imprisonment from one to ten years, with parole possible after serving one year.

Joseph Ellingson, father of the "jazz" girl, said today:

"I was not disappointed. I had expected either an insanity or manslaughter verdict."

FENWAY FILM HAS THRILLS APLENTY

Richard Dix Bests Fates In "The Lucky Devil"; Auto Race Is Feature

When it comes to thrills, there isn't much to beat a good slam-bang automobile road race with the scowl Richard Dix shows in his latest release, "The Lucky Devil," which opened at the Fenway Saturday.

"Lucky Devil" indeed is he to drive a car with a reputation for being a "hoodoo" (ask any race driver), with the fateful number "13" stenciled brightly on the radiator, have the misfortune to step the forward gears on the home stretch and then—cross the finish line a winner in reverse! But that's ahead of the story.

Mr. Dix first gets bitten badly by the speed bug when he wins a high-powered roadster at a charity bazaar. With a wide open throttle, he heads for the wide open spaces where tourist camps are—and speedily loses his heart to Esther Ralston, the fairest of all the campers.

Is he going her way? Well, rather! Nampa, a thriving county seat, is the place, but the Fates act queerly and they are both stranded there without funds. With the idea of arranging speedy payment for their debts, our hero enters the "old bus" in the county fair races. But, in order to raise the necessary entrance fee, takes the chance of winning the cash offered by a boxing champ, Gunboat Smith (himself), in one who will stay two rounds with him.

Richard gets beautifully biffed, but is on his feet at the final bell and so collects the cash and the race is all set. And what a race! But there at the finish was $10,000 and Esther; lucky devil!

Evelyn Brent, in "Miss Robinhood," proved a charming swashbuckler in the companion piece to the Dix feature and "saved" the oppressed people of old Spain in true Fairbanksian fashion.

Betty Alden

HUB SWIMMER SAVES 2 FROM DROWNING

Frank "Podge" Murphy, widely known swimmer, twice played the role of hero while 10,000 watched the annual races of City of Boston Off the Headhouse Beach, South Boston.

Becoming exhausted about 200 yards from shore a woman, about 50 years old, was seen to sink. Murphy swam to her and brought her ashore. After a few minutes she went home.

The excitement had hardly died down when a girl of sixteen, swimming beyond her depth, sank, came up and sank again. A shout from shore sent several bathers to her aid but again Murphy beat out the field. Diving he brought up the girl and she was also able to go home after a brief rest.

MRS. CHURCH, JR. (Muriel Vanderbilt) wore her favorite white, and Mrs. Vincent Astor (prior to her court appearance) was costumed in maize yellow, that mode tone; with a double rope of curls, as jewels a most becoming array for the (a) land slender one-time Helen Huntington.

MRS. ASTOR, by the way, as wife of New York Yacht Club's vice-commodore, was leading hostess to visiting yachtsmen of the Eastern fleet. Mrs. John B. Lawrence of Boston and Pittsfield was in Newport over the week-end. Going down primary to sail on the Advance (Mr. Lawrence's yacht) in the King's cup race.

PEACE PLAN IN BUILDING WAR CONSIDERED

Peace proposals advanced by Acting Mayor James T. Moriarty were considered today by the committee of seven which has represented the Building Trades Employers' Association at a conference with representatives of the United Building Trades' Council. It will take three weeks to a month for all unions to vote on any general agreement.

The workers' committee will make recommendations to the board of councillors of the association at the regular meeting scheduled for Wednesday. The committee has full power to act on the request of the council for a more specific proposition for a general agreement, but the sanction of the councillors will be requested before an answer is given the unions.

Secretary E. A. Johnson of the council went to Maine last Friday night, but will be recalled as soon as negotiations for an agreement start.

GERMAN PRESIDENT'S VACATION STRENUOUS

Dietramshell, Bavaria, Aug. 24 (A. P.)—The political opponents of Field Marshal Von Hindenburg, who predicted physical collapse for the 78-year-old warrior when he began his campaign for the presidency, would probably find much difficulty in keeping up with the vigorous routine he is following on his Summer outing.

President Von Hindenburg rises at 7:30 and works until noon, and then has a hearty dinner with the Von Schlicher family, whose guest he is. After dinner, he takes a three or four-hour walk.

BRIGHTON K. C. AT BILLERICA OUTING

The events included a ball game and a series of games and contests. Deputy Grand Knight Frank Nean was chairman of the outing committee; Harry P. McGovern, secretary and Joseph D. R. Muldoon, treasurer.

WOMEN'S FEET LARGER, SHOE MAN SAYS

Fort Worth, Aug. 24.—Are Cinderella feet extinct or are the diminutive pedal extremities fair women of former generations have been credited with merely a pretty fable?

Miss 1925 has nothing to be ashamed of, W. R. Jackson, seller of footgear, asserts.

Feet today are considered more human than ever before and are treated accordingly, he deduces from years of experience.

The average feminine foot measures larger than it did twenty years ago, but the girls of today are taller and their other bodily measurements are greater than were those of the weaker sex a generation back.

Six and a half is the shoe size of the average young woman. The regular stock of an orthdox shop ranges from size one and a half to ten and some portion of the trade qualifies for each measurement.

Florenz Ziegfeld has been widely quoted as designating number five as the ideal foot size for a successful chorine. This applies to the girl five feet four or five inches in height, however.

And therein lies another secret of the art of foot selling. Few women have feet proportionately large or small. Occasionally a woman of girth possesses a small foot and slender ankle but it is due to nature's scheme of things which bestowed small bones on her thus making her excessive weight unnatural.

MARNE BATTLEFIELD RICH WHEAT PRODUCER

The battlefield of the Marne, where the Americans helped the French turn the tide of the war seven years ago, will furnish a bumper crop of wheat this year.

Agricultural experts say that while the crops look good, the rust has done much damage and that an early July estimate of 90,000,000 metric hundred weight or 324,000,000 bushels of wheat must now be reduced to about 265,000,000 bushels. France consumes about 325,000,000 bushels a year.

WOMAN RIDER HURT IN RUNAWAY MISHAP

Pittsfield, Aug. 24.—Miss Nettie Williams, about 45 years old, employed by Dr. William J. Mercer, was seriously injured this morning when her horse became frightened by a trolley car and threw her to the pavement, near the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. bridge. She is in Hillcrest Hospital with multiple bruises on her back, thigh and body, and two lacerations on the back of her head. The horse reared and fell on Miss Williams, and then kicked her.

FINAL BEAUTY CONTEST TO BE HELD SEPT. 12

Any New England Girl Can Enter Whether In Prelim or Not

The night of Saturday, September 12, is the night.

Revere Beach is the place and the occasion is the grand final in the series of Bathing Beauty Contests the Boston Evening American has been conducting this season.

Every girl in New England is invited to contend for the $100 cash prize which will reward the winner. Whether you were in a preliminary or not you can enter the big contest.

In connection with the preliminary contests referred to above, there is good news and exciting news for those who fancy themselves in a bathing suit and think themselves competent to carry off a beauty prize.

It is that two new preliminary competitions have been added to the list—one on the evening of September 8 and one on the evening of September 10.

MAKE BIG HIT.

They will be subject to the same regulations that have governed the earlier ones, and will give an opportunity to the girl who has been spending her Summer out of town.

Triumphing in these additional competitions will give exactly the same right to enter the grand finale as a victory in any of the earlier contests.

As the remaining dates are now they stand August 25, August 27, September 1, September 3, September 8, September 10 and, of course, the final, or grand wind-up, on the 12th.

BE ON HAND AT 8:30

In the short time that has elapsed since these entertaining and interesting contests were started, entries and attendance have increased by the well-known leaps and bounds. When all the rival beauties chosen at the beauty tournaments already held and those still to be get together for the final a battle royal of beauty is assured and an attendance that will shatter existing records is as certain as the income tax.

Don't forget tomorrow night's big Bathing Beauty Contest. Entrants should be at the Nautical Ballroom entrance by 8:30 sharp. Remember this is not a bathing suit contest. It's a Bathing Beauty contest. It's the girl in the suit that counts. The most moderate-priced suit has as good a chance as the most expensive. The most unobtrusive suit will win if it is worn by the right girl.

In the excitement attendips that grand finale, don't forget the great digging contest for boys and girls.

WINTER'S COMING, KIDS.

On Monday, Wednesday and Friday this contest will be staged. Fifty books of tickets for $7 of the most exhilarating and thrilling of beach amusements will be held in the sand between the band stands at Revere and Beach streets in Revere.

Kids, it's up to you. Dig up one of the books and blow yourselves to a royal good time at the expense of the Boston Evening American. You can do it with your little shovel. In fact, you fact, you don't even need a shovel. A stick or your hands or any old thing will do.

Findings is keeping. Get busy. There's a long winter ahead, with no merry-go-rounds or roller coasters, but only the wind howling down the boulevard.

125,000 ENTER HUB SCHOOLS THIS FALL

When 125,000 children answer the roll calls at school opening in this city September 25, a new attendance record, will be chalked up, eclipsing last year's figure by 3,000.

Completion of two new schools is expected to take care of the normal growth in attendance. These are the Champlain school in the John Marshall district, School street, Dorchester, and the Dorchester high school for boys. The Roxbury high school for girls will not be completed for another year.

The entrance age for Boston is five years for primary classes and four years for kindergarten.

Schools in outlying towns and cities are opening at different dates. Quincy schools will open September 9, the entrance age being eight. Winthrop schools reopen on the same day. A new junior high school, one of the finest in the country, will take care of pupils in the 7th, 8th and 9th grades.

The entrance requirements for first graders are that they are five years of age since July 1. Newton and Revere schools will open September 14. September 8 marks the opening of the Milton schools, while Brookline classes commence September 14. Among the other schools that start September 9, are Belmont, Salem and Wellesley. Watertown opens September 10.t

Chelsea, Concord and Lexington will open September 9.

700 AT HOLYOKE CONVENTION OF A. O. H.

Matters Pertaining to U. S. and Ireland to Be Taken Up by Delegates

Many important matters relating to the United States and the Irish race in America, as well as in relation to Irish affairs, are to be considered by the several hundred delegates to the coming State convention of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, to be held at Holyoke today and tomorrow.

More than 700 delegates, men and women, representing nearly 50,000 members of the A. O. H. and Ladies' Auxiliary, were present when the convention was opened in the Holyoke city auditorium with a high mass.

National President, Michael Donohoe of Philadelphia and National Treasurer P. J. Dowd of Holyoke, attended.

More than 125 delegates from Boston, headed by County President Jeremiah Crowley of Charlestown and County Chaplain, Rev. Philip J. O'Donnell, rector of St. James' Church, Harrison avenue, were present.

RAPS FOREIGN PROPAGANDA.

The president and vice president of each of the 49 Boston divisions also attended as well as the six county officers of the Massachusetts organization, including County President Crowley, County Vice President Bartholomew Fahey, County Recording Secretary James J. Curley, County Treasurer Michael Ahearn and County Financial Secretary Gately.

Aside from the election of officers for the ensuing year, the most important business for consideration will be the resolutions. These will declare the policy of the organization and its attitude on the matter of foreign propaganda in this country and the functioning of the Irish Free State.

Matthew Cummings, national historian of the organization, referring to these two questions said:

"At the national convention we considered that foreign propaganda had become an actual menace to the independence of this country, in fact, an actual attempt to inveigle us into the so-called World Court, where we would have one vote on questions relating to this country, against all of Europe.

"This appeal by foreign propaganda in favor of the World Court is usually professed by their saying that it is a movement for peace. Our organization stands for peace, but peace with honor.

ATTITUDE ON FREE STATE

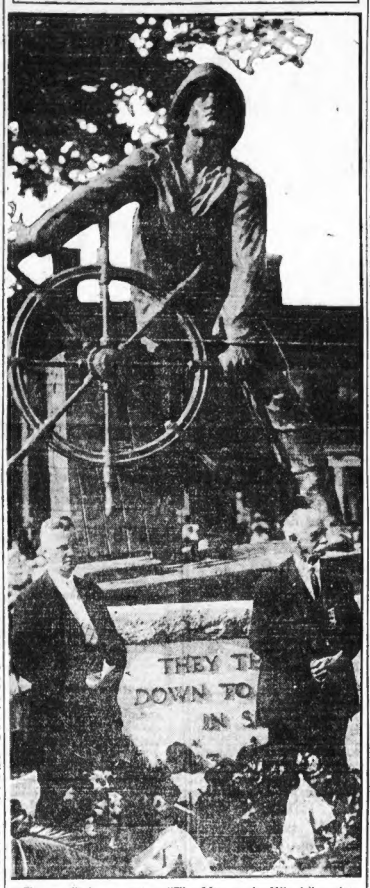
"Our attitude on the Irish Free State is always that while Hibernians ever hold aloft the ideal of complete national independence for Ireland, it has always been a tradition of the organization that it remained for the Irish at home to decide when and how that was to be obtained. It has always been the expressed opinion of the organization that only Irishmen, on Irish soil, can create an Irish nation.

The following state officers also are in attendance to the convention: State President Dennis J. Slattery of Weymouth, Vice President Michael Trainor of Salem, State Secretary Joseph Sharry of Worcester and State Treasurer Michael Dullea of Boston.

PEABODY MOTORCYCLE VICTIM UNIDENTIFIED

The body of a man found by early morning motorists lying beside a smashed motorcycle in Peabody is still unidentified. The man was seen in Lynnfield about midnight Saturday trying to learn to operate the machine. The cycle had hit a telephone pole.

GLOUCESTER LAUDS ITS SAILOR DEAD



City unveils bronze statue, "The Man at the Wheel," at the celebration of the city's 300th anniversary. The bronze was court street, Back Bay.

Gloucester, Aug. 24—Simple ceremony marked the unveiling of "The Helmsman," the bronze statue dedicated to the memory of the Gloucester fishermen who lost their lives at sea, at Stage Fort Park. It was followed by the memorial flower services, when thousands of blossoms were strewn on the waves as a tribute to the forty-five men who died at sea during the past year, the largest number out of Gloucester who have been lost in any one year.

CHELSEA TWO-ALARM DRIVES 25 FROM BEDS

Twenty-five people were driven from their beds to the street when two alarms were sounded for a fire in the three-story wooden tenements at No. 9 Lynn street, Chelsea. Damage is estimated at $7,000. The cause of the fire was not learned.

The blaze started in the rear of No. 8 and spread to No. 11. Hymen Schneider owns the first and William Katz the second.

RESCUE MEN 3 DAYS IN OPEN BOAT

After drifting three days and nights in a water logged and disabled speed boat, two men, starving and at the point of collapse, were rescued by the liner Cedric 14 miles off Nauset Light, Cape Cod.

The rescued men are John Ryan of No. 124 Rusdil avenue, Lynn, and Ralph DeListe of Gloucester.

The disabled boat was sighted by the Cedric as the two men feebly waved their coats as a distress signal. A line was passed to the speedboat which was towed beside the liner at reduced speed.

Answering a note sent aboard by a line, the men stated their craft, the C-508, a powerful new 35-footer, was turned over in a gale Friday night, 35 miles at sea. The boat righted itself and they, being strong swimmers, managed to clamber aboard.

Chief Steward Marsters sent aboard a hearty breakfast by means of a rope, as the Cedric radioed to the Chatham coast guard to send out a boat to their assistance.

Near Highland light the launch was cast off and towed to shore. Ryan and DeListe were taken to Provincetown for medical attention.

The rescue delayed the Cedric 8 hours in reaching Boston from New York to take on passengers for Queenstown.

MEDFORD GIRL GETS HERO MEDAL

Carolyn Johnson, 11, Wins Humane Society Award for Saving Drowning Boy

A signal honor has been bestowed upon Miss Carolyn Johnson, eleven-year-old West Medford girl, who has been awarded a medal by the Massachusetts Humane Society for her rescue of a boy in Mystic Lake June 19.

Samuel Goodnow, fifteen, of No. 8 Jackson road, was seized with cramps some distance from shore. He shouted for help. Carolyn was the only one of 100 bathers who heeded his cries. When she swam to his side Goodwin grabbed the girl and dragged her beneath the surface.

But she broke away and taking a fresh hold on his bathing suit, she towed the boy to shore where both fell unconscious on the sand.

Bay Stater Drowns

Rutland, Vt., Aug. 24 (A.P.)—George Hack, Jr., 21, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hack of North Brookfield, Mass., was drowned while swimming at Lake Bomoseen, near here. He had lived here five weeks while working as lineman.

Parrot's Shrieks Save Mistress at Fire

Hoboken, N. J., Aug. 24 (A.P.).—A parrot's shrieks as he perched on the prostrate body of his mistress saved the life of Mrs. Julia Loweinger, who was overcome by smoke during a fire in the woman's home. Firemen, believing they had cleared the building, were attracted by the cries of the parrott and found the unconscious woman, whom they soon revived.

800 CATHOLIC TEACHERS IN CONVENTION

Instructors Are Welcomed by the Rev. Fr. Hickey; Sessions Continue Till Friday

More than 800 teachers in the parochial school of the Archdiocese of Boston were in attendance at Boston College high school hall at the opening today of the 16th annual conference of the Teachers' Institute, which was established by Cardinal O'Connell in 1910.

The first session opened at 10 o'clock and is to be followed by daily sessions until the conferences close on Friday. The address of welcome will be made by the Rev. Augustine F. Hickey, diocesan supervisor of schools.

Prominent priests from various sections of the country will deliver lectures on Catholic education.

TOWN OFFICIAL FIRES BEACH FENCE

Crowd Cheers as Scituate Selectman Enters Humarock War

Efforts of Arthur Bean and other members of the Humarock Beach Improvement Association to bar the public from bathing at the beach were defeated for the nonce, when Chairman Ernest Severns of the Scituate selectmen with a gang of workmen, tore down a barricading fence and burned it in the presence of a cheering crowd.

Reminded that both fence and land were privately owned, Chairman Severns said:

"Don't care a hang about that! Go ahead, boys, get the kerosene!"

"What about a permit for the fire?" a spectator asked.

"Oh yes—well I'm fire commissioner of this town. I'll write one right now for the boys. Here she is (displaying the permit after a moment with a blank and fountain pen) let 'er burn."

The fence, erected by Arthur Bean, on his beach property, was put up Friday night to keep off intruders who had been trespassing on his land, and was at the end of the main street leading to the shore.

All day, throngs of strangers had gathered in front of this fence, and had made several attempts to camp on the private land beyond.

ZIEGFELD WILL QUIT STAGING FOLLIES

Plans Big Productions Like Louis XIV, for Cosmopolitan and Ziegfeld Theatres

By HAYDEN TALBOT
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

Special Wireless to Universal Service Copyright, 1925 by Universal Service.

London, Aug. 24.—"Unless conditions and circumstances radically change, the present Follies will be the last ever staged in the United States," declared Flo Ziegfeld in his suite at the Ritz today in the course of an interview exclusively for Universal Service.

But the famous glorifier of the American girl by no means intends to abandon the theatre as the following resume of his plans as he outlined them to me conclusively proves:

1.—He plans to concentrate on productions like "Louie the Fourteenth," both at the Cosmopolitan and the Ziegfeld Theatres, the latter now being built in New York.

2.—He will continue to search the world for novelties to be introduced into successful productions, changing the novelties two, three or even four times during the run of a piece.

BRINGING SIX BEAUTIES

3.—He is choosing from 1,000 aspirants tomorrow, on the stage at the Prince of Wales Theatre here, six of the most beautiful damsels to be taken with others to New York with him on the Leviathan Tuesday. They will be added to the "Louie" Company.

4.—He has virtually closed a deal to return to London within a year to produce a completely English Follies and undertake the glorification of the English girl exactly as he has done the same thing for the American fair sex.

5.—Before he sails Tuesday he expects to sign the final papers consummating a deal initiated at Deauville last week, the terms of which guarantees Ziegfeld a theatre close to Piccadilly Circus to be completed within fourteen months. It will become the permanent home of the English Ziegfeld Follies.

"Undoubtedly I will bring over several American principals," he explained, "but the backbone of the show will be entirely English. As certain principals now engaged by managers here under long contracts are at liberty I will engage them until the whole company from top to bottom will be English.

TOO COSTLY.

"The reason I am willing to let it become known that this is the last of the American Follies is that unless a radical change takes place in the theatre at home I will not be able to produce another Follies.

"During the two year run of the present Follies at the New Amsterdam Theatre, I have made four new editions, each costing upwards of $50,000. The original Follies twenty years ago cost only $13,000 to produce with an operating cost of $3,000 per week.

September Bride

A romance of the World War has culminated in the announcement of the engagement of Miss Marion C. Denton (above), daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred O. Denton of No. 31 Bellevue street, Dorchester, to Dr. Kenneth Clyde Farnsworth of No. 483 Beacon street, Boston. The wedding will take place September 17 at the Pilgrim Congregational Church, Dorchester. Dr. Farnsworth met Miss Denton at a function at the "Y. D." Club.

NEW CHURCH AT GLOUCESTER IS DEDICATED

Cardinal O'Connell Accepts Gift of Wealthy New York Woman in Name of Pope

Gloucester, Aug. 24.—Mrs. James C. Farrell of Albany, New York, daughter of the late multi-millionaire gas and traction magnate, Anthony N. Brady, and widow of James C. Farrell, financier, added another to her long list of benefactions in the gift of St. Anthony's Bythe-Sea, this city's newest Catholic church, which was dedicated with fitting ceremonies with Cardinal O'Connell presiding.

The church was erected by Mrs. Farrell in honor of her father.

The new edifice is located in the exclusive East Gloucester section near Mrs. Farrell's Summer mansion. It overlooks the harbor and the moorlands, and is built of field stone after old English designs.

At the conclusion of the consecrating ceremonies, Cardinal O'Connell, in the name of Pope Pius XI, presented Mrs. Farrell with a bronze medal in recognition of her generosity and charity. Mrs. Farrell has given hundreds of thousands of dollars to Catholic churches throughout the country.

YACHT'S MASTS HIT GLOUCESTER BRIDGE

Gloucester, Aug. 24.—Several hundred people came to the rescue of the yacht Firefly, that crashed into the Blynman drawbridge over the Annisquam River. Just after the memorial services for Gloucester fishermen were over, the yacht came swiftly down the river and before it could be stopped, her tall masts crashed into the bridge.

A LAST WORD ABOUT CRAB MEAT

It doesn't seem as if there was anything left in the world to say to you about crab meat, does there, and yet there really is, because I am all the time experimenting with the food products which are represented on the Martha Lee Page and I have discovered several new and delicious uses for this member of the shell fish family.

These are a little different from the recipes you'll find in the attractive Namco recipe book, illustrated in colors, which I am glad to send to anyone who cares to have it. It is really worth many times the two-cent stamp that will bring it to you. I do want to tell you of a little "different" way to make the always popular deviled crab. You can arrange this either in fire-proof shells, ramekins or the little flat brown and white individual baking dishes that you can find at any convenient five-and-ten.

First melt two tablespoons of butter and add 2 tablespoons of flour and 2-3 of a cup of clear chicken broth (you can get it for as little as 15 cents a can at the S. S. Pierce Company), stir until smooth, then add the yolks of 2 eggs, 2 tablespoons of sherry jell, salt, pepper and paprika to taste. Let this cook for 3 minutes. Then add 1 cupful of chopped crab meat and one-fourth cupful of chopped mushrooms, either canned or fresh ones that have been cooked. Let simmer for 2 or 3 minutes longer, then add 1 teaspoon of finely chopped parsley. Let the mixture cool. Fill your baking dishes and strew over the top fine buttered bread crumbs, and bake until the tops are brown.

This was recently served at quite a smart luncheon out on Beacon Street and received a generous amount of praise.

Namco comes in two convenient sizes, a 1-lb.-ounce can and a smaller size, 6½ ounces. I will be glad to tell you where you can buy the "crab meat of no regrets."

Recipes for Parts of Today's Menu

TIDDY RINKTUM

2 cups stewed tomatoes (canned or fresh), 12c
1 tsp. salt, ½ tsp. sugar, ⅛ tsp. pepper, dash of cayenne, 1 tbsp. chopped onions, 4c
½ pound cheese, 18c
1 egg, 5c
Hathaway's Buttered Toast, 2c
1 tsp. butter, 1c

Bring the tomatoes to a boil and add all of the seasonings. Then add the cheese, cut into bits, stirring constantly until smooth. Last of all add the butter and then the beaten egg, stirring rapidly and serving immediately on slices of Hathaway's hot buttered toast.

Total cost of recipe, 42c. Serves 4. Cost per person, 10½c.

CRAB MEAT AND TOMATO SALAD

1 can Namco crab meat, 65c

Make a nest of the lettuce hearts in the center of the salad dish and fill this with mayonnaise dressing and sprinkle with paprika.

Total cost of recipe, $1.15. Serves 4. Cost per person, 28¾c.

A FRUIT PRESS OF MANY USES

Not very long ago I was asked to give space in my kitchen to one of the new Dilver fruit and vegetable presses and I have already found so many uses for it that it will certainly be a permanent fixture.

The Dilver is a big, substantial strainer-press that clamps on the edge of your table, stove or shelf. By a simple turn of the handle all the juices are taken out of vegetables, and seeds and skins removed from fruits. Whether you want to make apple sauce, ketchup, grape juice, fruit butter, soup or riced potatoes, the Dilver will save you time and strength.

When cranberry season comes round, the Dilver will separate the bitter skins and many of the seeds from the berries and will give you perfect cranberry sauce or jelly in a fifth of the usual time and with a saving of one-third in sugar. The Dilver will separate the skin and seeds from a bushel of tomatoes in ten minutes and will give you an excellent vegetable puree in less time than it takes to tell. By attaching your jelly bag to the ring of the stand before the bowl is put into place, the pulp of all fruits is separated from the clear juice in one operation.

The Dilver will prepare bread and cracker crumbs for cooking purposes, too, and will grate cheese over the top of your au gratin dishes and will smooth custards and remove the particles from cereals.

Potatoes riced through a Dilver look like feathers with practically no waste. And you won't even need to peel your apples for apple sauce, for the Dilver will strain out all skins, seeds and hard core part.

Let me send you a little booklet that will tell you more about the many uses of the Dilver and where you can purchase it.

ZA-REX PUNCH

ZA-REX Real Fruit Juice Syrups

THE HANDY JUG OF JOY

It would be hard for me to tell just how many times this Summer I've gone to my jugs of Joy (Zarex, in six flavors) that hold an important corner on the shelves of my kitchenette. Not only has Zarex saved the day, or rather the evening, by furnishing a delicious cold drink for thirsty guests, but it is fast supplanting my lemon and vanilla bottles for flavoring my cakes and frostings.

You have no idea what delicious frostings you can make with one cup of sugar, one-third of a cup of boiling water, the whites of two eggs and a tablespoonful of your favorite flavor of Zarex. Put the sugar and water in a sauce pan and bring slowly to the boiling point, stirring constantly. When it boils, don't stir any more. Let it boil until the syrup will spin a thread, then pour it gradually over the beaten whites of the two eggs, beating the mixture every minute until it is just right to spread. Then quickly add the tablespoon of Zarex and pour the frosting over your cake, spreading it finely.

The cake will be especially delicious if you have flavored it with Zarex, either in the same flavor of the icing or a contrasting flavor, for instance, orange frosting with lemon flavoring in the cake or vice versa. Just use your favorite cake recipe, and instead of vanilla, add one tablespoon of Zarex fruit syrup.

For a quicker frosting instead of the one I have given you, try mixing together four tablespoons of any flavor Zarex syrup, three tablespoons of boiling water, and enough confectioners' sugar to make a thick, smooth frosting. Spread it with a knife dipped in boiling water.

The Lemon-A Zarex will make one of the nicest lemon pies you ever ate. I haven't room for the recipe here, but I'll send it to you if you like. Zarex Lemon-A is made just from pure fresh lemon juice and will make a delicious lemonade for loosening up one of the persistent Summer colds that seem so prevalent. It is good for Winter colds, too, and, best of all, pleasant to take.

NEW CONTAINERS FOR ICE CREAM

One of the chief drawbacks of buying ready-made ice cream has been that you had your choice of dashing madly home lest the contents of the pasteboard box liquify before you could deliver it to your culinary department, or of ordering it delivered to your home and then watchfully waiting for several days for the man to come for the mould and bucket. These problems are no more, thanks to the new sealed packages such as the H. P. Hood Company are using in distributing their old-fashioned cream.

Not only is it a comfortable thought to realize that the triple-ply package gives complete protection to the cream and that no hands have touched the contents until you open the carton, but the new package enables you to serve your cream more attractively than ever before.

Just as soon as the package comes from your Hood dealers, put it in your ice chest and go ahead with the preparations for your dinner, secure in the knowledge that when you're ready for it, it will still be in perfect condition. Then slip the cream from the package on to the ice cream platter and serve it without waste or fuss, or for company service you might place a slice of cream on a slice of sponge cake that has been thickly spread with strawberry jam or marmalade. Then put on another thin slice of cake and another tablespoonful of jam, and you will have a really unusual and delicious dessert. Your own ingenuity will tell you many other attractive ways in which to serve this pure, wholesome cream.

Don't forget that your favorite flavor is all packed and ready for you in a convenient sanitary package at your nearest Hood dealer's.

MARINE TRIED FOR REFUSING TO TAKE DIP

Member of Coolidge Guard Goes to Navy Yard 'Brig' for Disobedience

This is the tale of a "Soldier of the Sea" who wouldn't go near the water.

He is one of President Coolidge's marine guard of fifty picked men on duty at White Court and aboard the Presidential yacht Mayflower.

Now he's doing "a bit" in "the brig" over at Charlestown navy yard because he refused to take a dip with other "Devil Dogs" in the cold waters of the Atlantic.

A large majority of the marine detachment at White Court were only too glad to go into camp right in Mother Ocean's lap, when the hot sultry days came around.

Not so the recalcitrant, whose name marine officers, Captain Adolphus Andrews and Lieutenant Edgar Allen Poe, refuse to divulge.

Ordered with others to "go over the side" from the sandy beach fronting the marine camp at Swampscott, Me. "Jaw-rine" flatly refused.

Refusing to obey an order is a serious thing in the marine corps.

So the recalcitrant was held a prisoner aboard the Mayflower. The charges were sent to Washington and it is reported a court-martial was held at Charlestown navy yard. President Coolidge did not interest himself in the affair, it is said.

Lieutenant Poe, in command of the White Court detail, ordered the daily ocean dip as a means of keeping his men in top physical shape.

VETERINARY HELD IN DRUNKEN DRIVING CASE

Dr. J. F. Humphreyville, No. 176 Church street, Watertown, when arraigned in district court at Concord, charged by Patrolman William C. O'Leary of the Lexington police with being drunk and with operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor, pleaded not guilty and the case was continued until Wednesday, that he might obtain counsel.

He is a veterinary and about 36 years of age.

EVERETT SAFE ROBBED TWICE IN 15 MONTHS

For the second time in fifteen months, and in a manner almost identical with the earlier break, the vault in the Boston Varnish Company's office on Second street, East Everett, was burglarized Sunday.

The extent of the loss will not be known until the books are examined. Officials of the company are inclined to believe that the loss in cash will not exceed $500. Valuable papers may be missing, however.

SPANISH REVOLUTIONARY PROPAGANDA SPREADING

Recent attempts to assassinate King Alfonso, were declared to be only rumors in a recent official statement. This statement, the Barcelona dispatch said, was part of the government's "unsuccessful attempt to demonstrate the country's tranquility by suppression of all unwelcome news."

will be called on to send Cole on his way.

Each morning at 9:15 he will report to the American and detail to a member of the staff his activities of the night before. He will give the writer the names and numbers of police officers with whom he came in contact and his claims will be verified.

He will then begin his day's driving. During the first day of the test Cole will spend all his time in Boston proper with trips into the immediate vicinity such as to Charlestown, East Boston, South Boston, Dorchester, Jamaica Plain, Brighton and Allston.

Each day at noon Cole will come back into Boston and go to a point on Boston Common where he will tell great gatherings just what he has done, why he is doing it and what he intends doing" until the next time they meet. Cole's a good talker and his narrative should be one of great interest to the throngs.

Wednesday noon at 12:15 he will start in a brand new Essex coach equipped with new Selberling tires, Lovejoy shock absorbers and Weed chains in the event of their being necessary. And the gas tank will be filled with that necessary commodity at a Metropolitan gas and oil station. Oil, too, will be taken aboard there.

Each day there'll be a sufficient quantity of ice cream come direct from Hood's manufacturing plant. Hoodsie's will be an important part of his daily menu. Cole plans to be served with ice cream about every three or four hours during his long and tiring grind. Each day he will receive three dozen Hoodsie's.

"In previous tests," said Cole to the Boston Evening American, "I have existed through the medium of drinking milk. Ice cream has great food-giving properties and I feel that it will do me just as much good to eat Hoodsie's, and frequently through the day and night I shall be served them.

"This will be my first trip East for this purpose. I feel that it will be carried through successfully. Boston has a number of fine roads and that adds materially to the task which confronts me when driving while masacled."

SULLIVAN SEES FAILURE FOR MISS EDERLE

No Woman Has Strength to Swim Channel, Lowell Expert Declares

Some reasons why Miss Gertrude Ederle, New Jersey mermaid, failed in her recent attempt to swim the English Channel and other arguments in substantiation of his belief that no women will ever successfully negotiate the 20-mile struggle against rip tides of the channel are given by Henry F. Sullivan of Lowell, first American to achieve the difficult feat.

"A woman, in my opinion, must be built big and muscular like a man to accomplish that feat. Nature does not build women that way. They simply haven't the strength.

"I will tell you why strength is the most important factor in making the channel swim. It has been figured out that the North Sea contains more than 150,000 square miles of water. When this great mass flows through the English Channel the tide drops from 15 to 17 feet. In rushing out the water first strikes the shores of France and Belgium, which shunts it across the channel toward the English coast. The tide is already running out fast along the English coast so that the two tides meet between the shores causing a rip tide, the strongest swimmers have ever attempted to master.

Woman Collapses and Dies at North Station

Waiting for a train in the outbound waiting room at the North Station joyfully discussing with her husband a holiday she had planned together, Mrs. William J. Jackson, 65, of No. 559 Bennington street, East Boston, suddenly complained of illness. Before her husband could call for aid she collapsed and an ambulance was summoned from Haymarket Relief Hospital.

At the hospital Mrs. Jackson was pronounced dead.

Hit by Trolley Car

A sixty-five-year-old woman giving the name of Bessie Golden, but unable to give any further information about herself on account of lack of understanding the English language, was struck by a trolley car on Bliss Hill avenue, near Franklin Field, and taken to the City Hospital. Her condition is not serious.

DUEL TO DEATH IN LOCKED BATHROOM

Room Mates in Battle With Single Razor; One Killed, Other Dying

New York, Aug. 24 (A.P.)—Locked in a bathroom, two men, roommates, fought a duel with a single razor early today in a rooming-house in West Ninety-Ninth street. One of them was killed and the other seriously slashed about the throat.

The head of William Walters, the dead man, was almost cut off. Edwin Castellomes, the other man, may die.

Tenants said that after the fight started, Walters went into a bathroom on the floor below, and locked himself in. Castellomes then jumped from the room to an extension roof, from which he climbed into the bathroom. There they fought their razor duel.

Police, called by the tenants, broke down the bathroom door and found Walter's dead.

Vanessa Is Accused After a Shot in the Dark and Is Ordered Out of Her Husband's Home

LORD HUBERT ST. AUSTEL, confronted with the task of raising a huge sum of money quickly to protect old friends who have invested in his pet project, goes to BENJAMIN LEVY, a money lender. The latter refuses to aid except on condition that Lord St. Austel marry his daughter, VANESSA LEVY. Lord Hubert promises to make his decision overnight. Vanessa falls in love with Hubert at first sight at the opera, where he decides he does not care for ALLICE, DUCHESS OF LINCOLNWOOD.

After the Duchess of Lincolnwood fell, wounded, in the garden, when a shot rang out, following her attempt to embrace Lord Hubert, Vanessa, who had trailed them, appeared and said to her husband: "What I have done was wrong, I know, but I was wild from jealousy. I love you. I love you and you have tortured me and driven me mad."

Hubert tells his friend and companion, COL. RALPH DANGERFIELD, of his decision, and Levy informs Vanessa that she is to marry the very man she had fallen in love with. Hubert slips a ring on Vanessa's finger at their engagement dinner, but does not kiss her and she wonders at his coldness. He tells Allice of his engagement and learns that Vanessa had gazed at him adoringly at the opera. Hubert and Vanessa are married, and his coldness continues. Not until another man points out her beauty does Hubert notice Vanessa, and then with an awakened fury he answers, "That is my wife!" Hubert is horrified to discover that he is beginning to care for his unwanted wife. OSCAR ISAACSON, Levy's clerk, who had been laughed at when he asked for Vanessa's hand, becomes a lurking menace in her life, trailing her everywhere. Vanessa, insulted by Hubert's friends, is on the point of leaving him forever when she discovers she is about to become a mother. Vanessa and Hubert quarrel over the attentions CHARLES LANGLEY is paying her. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XVII.

(Copyright, 1925, by Elinor Glyn. All Rights Reserved.)

THIS night she looked more like a Queen than ever—in a gold and silver gown—her glorious hair twisted with pearls, and on her arm she carried her father's present, the Chinese shawl.

Dinner passed off with outward calm and then for an hour Vanessa and Hubert stood and received their guests, who were coming on to the dance. They never spoke to each other—Vanessa's frozen mein seemed to paralyze the words on Hubert's lips——

Vanessa, Jealous, Follows Hubert

Then the dancing began to be in full swing so they could leave their posts and with a sigh of relief Hubert moved into the saloon. How he loathed the whole thing. Tomorrow when all the friends would be gone and he would be alone with Vanessa, then he would make her speak to him—and begin gradually to break down the barrier between them.

He had better definitely let Allice see that he was bored with her and had no intention of putting up with her insidious advances any longer. He had been a weakling to have allowed her to be as foolish and sentimental as she had certainly been in these last days.

With this intention he gravitated toward her. She was in a silver gown also, and he could not help noticing how much more beautiful Vanessa looked of the two.

Shot Rings Out As She Runs

The little insolence of again picking up Vanessa's scarlet embroidered shawl seemed to gratify Allice's small spirit. She wrapped it around her, and as Vanessa came in from the green drawing room, where she had been receiving the guests, she just caught sight of her husband and the Duchess disappearing through the windows to the terrace.

All the passionate Italian strain in her seemed to come uppermost—a mad feeling of jealousy overcame her. She must follow them. She could bear it no longer. She must

COMES NOW "THE FALL SHOES GIRL"

3 Parcels of Hub 'Dirt' Assessed at $250 Square Foot

FALL SHOES GIRL IS LATEST

Boston Evening American Offers $100 for Her Capture Saturday

The New Fall Shoes are with us.

There are the most attractive window displays in town you ever saw, so the Boston Evening American is going to start the season with a flourish by letting a pretty girl display the niftiest, smartest, snappiest pair of shoes to be found, on the boardwalk at Revere next Saturday.

Remember what the poet said about looking at the stars, not at the mud which surrounds our feet?

Well, everyone is going to forget his words of wisdom for just one day, while their eyes eagerly search the neighborhood of the earth for the shoes which mean a $100 bill.

VARIETY OF SHOES.

There are all kinds of perfectly lovely shoes for Fall wear. Pumps and oxfords and brogues and strap shoes, and, don't forget, they may be brown in most any shade, or gray or black.

During the week take a look at the shops and see what styles are going to be most favored for the smart demoiselle.

There will be some pictures to help you, as there were on all other occasions.

RULES ARE THE SAME.

The rules of the contest are the same as on previous occasions, and an even greater crowd is expected to turn out for the shoe hunt.

See what you think of the Boston Evening American's "Girl With the New Fall Shoes." Maybe you will get an idea from her. She might have the very kind of shoes you've wanted all your life.

Remember the rules of the game.

First. Have a copy of the Boston Evening American of the current date, Saturday, August 29.

Second. Show it to the young lady with these words, "You are the Boston Evening American's "Girl With the New Fall Shoes."

Then there is another prize of $10 to be given to the young lady who is sporting the prettiest Fall shoes—not the American Girl—and twenty-five books of tickets to other girls who wear new Fall shoes.

FALL HAT WINNERS

If you weren't at Revere Beach Saturday you missed the time of your life, for the Boston Evening American's "Girl in the New Fall Hat" gave the boys and girls and grown-ups a "run for their money." She led them a chase that lasted over an hour before she was finally ensnared in the trap of Mrs. Florence Rosenfeld, No. 9 Egremont road, Brighton.

"FALL HAT GIRL" IS CAUGHT

Mrs. Kathleen Conway of No. 70 Bellingham avenue, Beachmont, awarded $10 for wearing the most attractive headgear seen at Revere Beach during the time the hunt for the Boston Evening American's "Fall Hat Girl" was on, and (above) Mrs. Florence Rosenfeld of No. 9 Egremont road, Brighton, indentifying the "Fall Hat Girl" and thereby winning $100.

SUBWAY'S ENTRANCE CUTS TAX

Tremont Street Property Has Highest Valuation in State; Jumps Since 1921

Three parcels of real estate in Boston, situated at the north and south corners of Tremont and Winter streets, and the south corner of Tremont street and Temple place, are assessed for $250 a square foot, the highest valuation in the State.

These three parcels increased in value $10 a square foot since 1921.

Henry F. Long, commissioner of corporations and taxation, in publishing the list of State valuations, declares the southeast corner of Washington and Winter streets is valued at $255 a square foot but the subway easement of $55 reduces this assessment to $200 a square foot.

In Worcester, the highest assessment, $100 a square foot, is on property at Main and Front street, occupied by a drug store. The highest assessment in Springfield is on real estate occupied by a department store at Main and Vernon streets. This is valued at $58.50 a square foot.

Cambridge is well represented in the high value table with an assessment of $31.45 a square foot on a parcel at Massachusetts avenue and Essex street. This real estate is occupied by a tobacco shop and small stores, and assessed in 1921 at $21.20 a square foot.

25 NATIONS TO JOIN IN WASHINGTON ARMS PARLEY

Washington, Aug. 24.—Twenty-five nations including the Central Powers as well as the recent Allies, will be represented at a conference of the Interparliamentary Union invited by President Coolidge to meet in Washington, October 1, it has been announced.

Prominent among the subjects to be discussed are the criminality of wars of aggression, reduction of armaments, the problem of national minorities, rights and duties of nations, habit forming drugs, and the crisis in the parliamentary system.

Senator William B. McKinley will head the American delegation.

MAN HELD FOR ABDUCTION CLAIMS SECRET MARRIAGE

For one week Vincenzo Palermo and Mildred Mazzone were missing from East Saugus. The police had asked that he be arrested for abduction and she as a stubborn child. Sunday Patrolman Roland S. Mansfield, of the Saugus police found them at Forge Village, near Lowell.

The couple refused to tell the police anything about themselves, but insisted a marriage had been performed. They failed to produce a license.

NEW B. C. HEAD PAYS TRIBUTE TO FR. DEVLIN

Expressing hopes of emulating the achievements of his predecessor, the Rev. Fr. William Devlin, who goes to St. Andrew-on-the-Hudson, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., a Jesuit seminary, as assistant to the president, the Rev. Fr. James H. Dolan, late of Holy Cross, has taken over the reins as president of Boston College.

Born in Roxbury, Father Dolan was graduated from Boston College in 1903. For five years he taught Latin, Greek and English literature at Georgetown. He spent a year at St. Andrew-on-the-Hudson, and since 1921 has been in charge of the department of psychology at Holy Cross.

The only policies he wished to express at the present time had to do with maintaining the fine traditions of B. C. in scholarship and clean athletics. He is keenly interested in the latter, saying, however, that the standing of the college as an educational institution should be considered first.

Father Daniel Ryan, former regent of Fordham University Law School and recently assigned to the Boston College faculty, has been appointed to succeed Father Dolan as the professor of senior psychology at Holy Cross.

Cop Couldn't Fool This Bear With Plain Clothes

Pleasantville, N. J., Aug. 24 (A.P.).—George Adams, policeman of this city, was injured by a bear that reached its paw through the iron bars of its cage and tore a piece of flesh from his legs. The bear has been performing nightly here and has a peculiar animosity towards men in police uniforms. Adams was in his civilian clothes, but the bear was not fooled.

Revere Beach '40 Winks' Costs $65, Watch

Edward Allen of No. 32 Crest avenue, Revere, fell asleep in his auto while the machine was parked on Baker avenue, Revere Beach. When he awoke he found a roll of $65 and a white gold watch had been taken from his pockets and a red stone ring removed from his finger. He reported the loss to Chief Dyer of the Revere police.

American Tourists Leave Deluge of Spats in London

London, Aug. 24 (A.P.).—Thousands of American tourists who visited London spent there money freely and now are homeward bound will not be easily forgotten, because they have left a plague of "spats" behind them.

The visitors were told it was the correct thing to wear spats, and spats were bought to match each suit they purchased. Considering they would have no use for such things at home, they packed their baggage and left the spats behind.

DANNY KRAMER IS FAVORITE OVER FINNEGAN

TOM KIRBY ON WITH ROBSON

Madden Tackles Allen, Smith Meets Andressano in Tussles at the Cycle A. C.

BOXING CARD TONIGHT

1—Johnny Ryan, Cambridge, vs. Jimmy Harmon, Brookline; six rounds.

2—Johnny Andressano, East Boston, vs. Tod Smith, Canton, O.; ten rounds.

3—Jimmy Madden, Roxbury, vs. Whitey Allen, Hyde Park; ten rounds.

4—Tom Kirby, Roxbury, vs. Tommy Robson, Malden; ten rounds.

5—Danny Kramer, Philadelphia, vs. Dick (Honeyboy) Finnegan, Dorchester; ten rounds.

By JACK CONWAY.

DANNY KRAMER, a midget package of TNT, will be released against Honeyboy Finnegan in the feature ten-round battle at the Cycle A. C.'s blasting ring card at the Revere Track tonight.

Kramer, 125 pounds when all soaking wet, socks as hard as a middleweight.

Jack Conway

Fighting right foot extended, Kramer dents the enemy with left hand smacks to the ribs. He hits them so hard that their ancestors feel the force of his blows.

It will be a regular home coming for Danny. He was born in the West End, while his mother and brothers and sisters now reside in Revere.

Kramer is one of those kids who had to leave his own home town flat on its back to gain national recognition. He has done most of the major league fighting on the Pacific Coast and in New York and Philadelphia rings.

OVER in Philadelphia the other night Kramer ran against George Chaney of Baltimore. Chaney has been sure poison for southpaws. His left hand belt has flattened most of the opposition. It wasn't so with Kramer, the young man in the other corner. The tussle had gone just 59 seconds when Chaney was being carried to his corner, the victim of a right hook to the whiskers followed by a left-hand poke to the ribs.

Kramer took part in the New York elimination tournament for featherweights. He sailed through with flying colors until he bumped into Kid Kaplan in the final. The latter won by a knockout after one of the greatest punching duels ever witnessed between midget fighters.

FINNEGAN, like Kramer, has been buzzing along on all eight cylinders. His skyrocket effort was a decisive victory over Johnny Dundee at Frank Dane's club in Washington.

Finnegan, like Kramer, does his shooting from the port side. Out in Dorchester they will tell you that Honeyboy will be the next featherweight champion.

Kramer is a favorite to win.

Governor Likes Them, Too

ALVAN T. FULLER
GOVERNOR

THE COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT
STATE HOUSE, BOSTON

The special sport section of the Boston American is a very interesting exposition of the athletic life of America. Its wide range of subjects, its clear-cut photographs, and its well thought-out comments on sports generally make interesting reading.

Alvan T. Fuller

Governor Alvan T. Fuller has known and followed sports since the day he was a racing bicycle rider. The above statement, sent from the State House to the sporting editor of the Boston Evening American, tells its own story. It is high praise indeed. The Saturday Sport Special of this newspaper is the talk of Boston and of New England. More and more people are buying it each week.

WOODSIES LOOK LIKE PENNANT CONTENDERS

By WILLIAM McAULEY

The Boston pro soccer team showed in the game Saturday that it will be a big factor in determining where the American league pennant shall go this season. The eleven, as a whole, never looked better, and the three new men, Blair, R. Ballantyne and Westwater were right at home, taking every chance offered them to show their class.

The game was fast for an opener and the Providence team provided more opposition than the score would indicate. McNab, McIntyre, McMillan, Blair an the Ballantyne brothers played brilliant soccer considering that they had arrived on these shores but the night before.

The Hub aggregation was in fine condition and looked as if it had been training for a month.

The visitors looked weak in spots and Sam Fletcher will have to add a few new players in order to be in the race. McAuley, the right back, proved a star for the Clamdiggers and if he continues to play as he did Saturday will have few superiors in this country. The Everton club of the English League have offered him terms to make the trip across the water, but he has decided to stay here for the present.

O'NEILL AND WITT NOW WITH READING CLUB

New York, Aug. 24.—Catcher Steve O'Neill and Outfielder Lawson (Whitey) Witt, both made free agents by the Yankees, have joined Reading. The addition of the two players adds a great deal of strength to Chick Shorten's team, as they still have a lot of good baseball left in them.

International League

Buffalo 5, Reading 6 (first game); Buffalo 12, Reading 1 (second game).
Syracuse 3, Jersey City 2 (first game); Jersey City 7, Syracuse 6 (second game).
Providence 4, Rochester 2 (first game); Rochester 6, Providence 2 (second game).

Sox End Series With Browns

St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 24.—The Red Sox close their series here with today's game and move over to Detroit with hopes of checking Ty Cobb's drive for a first division position.

The Sislerites made it two of three from Fohl's aggregation yesterday by socking Howard Ehmke for seven hits, six of which were hung up for extra bases.

The Sox pounded Gland hard, but were unable to do anything with the husky southpaw when they had players in scoring positions.

JUNIOR TITLE YACHTING AT MARBLEHEAD

By GEORGE W. GRIMM

The fifth annual series of races for the Massachusetts junior yacht championship starts today in Marblehead Bay. Sixteen boys and two girls, representing six yacht clubs in Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Long Island Sound, are competing for the title and the Sears Cup, the trophy for the winners.

The six teams are drawn for three races, two in the preliminary round and one in the semi-finals, and are to sail the best two out of three races in each contest in Herreshoff one-design 8 Class yachts, changing boats after each race. This is the first year that this arrangement has prevailed.

The entrants represent the Stamford, Conn., Yacht Club, Hugenot Yacht Club, New Rochelle, N. Y., Bristol, R. I., Yacht Club, Edgartown Yacht Club, Duxbury Yacht Club and Pleon Yacht Club of Marblehead. The Pleon Y. C. is the defending champion.

DOUBLES TITLE PLAY STARTS AT LONGWOOD

By FRED C. LANE

What is considered the finest array of tennis stars ever to enter a national tourney will compete for the national doubles championship on the courts of the Longwood Cricket Club, Chestnut Hill, starting today. The best combinations from Australia, Spain, Japan, France and the leading U. S. teams are among the 32 pairs on the entry list.

Of the 64 players picked by the committee as having sufficient qualifications to start, 21 are foreign stars. This is the largest number of foreigners ever to seek the trophy now held by the Kinsey brothers of California.

Though the trophy has been carried out of the United States but three times in the history of the competition, there are invading combinations in the field this year that appear to stand a fine chance of winning.

The doubles play of Gerald Patterson and John Hawkes, representing Australia, is well nigh perfect and the American teams will have to be at their best to stop the Anzac.

Then the French team of Gene Borotra and Rene LaCoste is not to be held lightly. Their latest achievement of winning the Wimbledon doubles title proves that the French pair will be hard to beat.

Little hope is held for the Kinsey team to retain its title. An extensive six-months tour of the country during which they played scores of strenuous matches caused them to go stale and they haven't recovered yet.

The recent showing of Vincent Richards and R. Norris Williams leads the fans to believe that if the foreigners walk away with the trophy they will at least know that they were in a fight.

William Tilden, singles champion, is paired with Sandy Weiner, the youngest player entered in the tourney. Weiner has improved much since last year, and Tilden is as good as ever.

Yet, tennis officials are not figuring on this team being able to overcome the sterling play of the Anzac or French combinations.

In addition to doubles title play, the Longwood committee has arranged for four other tournaments, which will bring the best women players of this country and England together.

Today's play will be confined to the men's national doubles event. Tomorrow, the competition in the fathers' and sons' doubles will start. Wednesday the women's singles will get under way, as well as the mixed doubles' tourney.

It promises to be a most interesting week for lovers of the net game.

35 CANDIDATES WILL REPORT AT COLUMBIA

New York, Aug. 24 (AP).—Thirty-five men will report for football to Coach Charles F. Crowley September 1, Columbia University authorities announced. Crowley was named last Fall to succeed Dr. Paul Withington, who assumed charge upon the death of Percy D. Haughton during the 1924 season. The first game is with Haverford September 26.

What Fans Say

DECISION CONTEMPTIBLE.

Boston, Mass.

Sporting Editor:

Just to let you know how I feel about the bout between Maloney and Solomon. I THINK IT WAS THE MOST CONTEMPTIBLE THING I HAVE SEEN. As far as fair play is concerned to give Maloney the decision when Solomon had his man licked. As for an outside fighting a Boston man he can not expect to get a decision with such a referee as was out to Braves Field. We Americans pride ourselves on the spirit of fair play. Anything but this was seen Thursday night.

You can print this in your paper and see how other fair-minded people feel about it.

G. C. BRUCE.

OWE "KING" APOLOGY

Sporting Editor:

BOSTON BOXING OFFICIALS OWE KING SOLOMON AN APOLOGY for the decision which they sympathetically handed over to Maloney because of the fact that he (Maloney) is a "promising" contender for the heavyweight title and also because he is a "local" boy. Or, perhaps, it is because their vision is impaired and they need assistance in purchasing binoculars.

Come on boys, and all dig down.

Boxing is a sucker's pastime now. The good old days are gone.

N. MELLAS.
18 Brainard Rd., Allston.

AGREES WITH DECISION

Sporting Editor:

I believe what Maloney said in Friday's paper. Solomon didn't knock him out before the bell rang, but after the bell had rung. Otherwise he wouldn't have knocked him out. But why don't the boxing commissioners let them fight again. MALONEY IS A REAL FIGHTER AND I THINK THAT NO ONE CAN BEAT HIM IN NEW ENGLAND.

But just let them fight again.

JOSEPH GENTIL.
12 Vernon Place, Boston, Mass.

OFFICIATING A DISGRACE

Sporting Editor:—

I was more than pleased to read Jack Conway's report on Thursday night's happening at Braves Field. The refereeing and timekeeping would have been a disgrace even at a comedy.

The Solomon affair is too bad to even be talked about.

Poor Solomon has been robbed at least twice in this city so why impose on good nature by asking him to fight again in Boston.

Yours for a new commission.

BRAVES CLOSE RED SERIES AT WIGWAM

By NICK FLATLEY

One touch of high life make a ball club crazy. The Braves are that way now. They shot out of the cellar for a few minutes Saturday afternoon, and liked the sensation so much that they have decided to get out, and stay that way.

The escape isn't going to be easy, though. When the Braves play the Cubs, their immediate rivals for the sink just now, they will undoubtedly emerge and start toward the fighting. But there's a mean obstacle in between, the same being the Pittsburgh Pirates.

The Bancrofts, who delighted a record crowd at the week end double header, play one more game with the Reds this afternoon, and then entertain the leaders for the next three days. That series should be the best baseball mixup provided for this village in years.

When the Pirates were here a month ago, they dropped three games out of five, and were lucky to win the pair they did. Our Braves like to smack the leaders down. Their shameful conduct kept the Giants in the race on that last Cozmair visit. Then to make everything even, the Bannys gave the Giants a toasting immediately afterward.

The first division isn't more than a hop, skip and jump away from the Tribe, and the boys are hustling to get into it. They have been promised all sorts of bonuses if they climb into the select circle, and athletes like those gifts.

The Reds still have pennant hopes, though their ambitions seem foolish to a casual outsider. They may beat out the Giants, and they may pass the Pirates, if that team blows wide open, but it's hard to figure how they could waltz by both clubs. Still, while they have a pinnacle ideas, they are hustling, and that assured a frisky start for a new week.

The Braves won five out of six on the Wigwam stretches last week, and that is good enough for any league. There was a let down due and it arrived in the second game of the Red double-header. Good support for Cooney would have made that affair a real battle, but the defense, wonderfully keen before, cracked, and the Hendricks groupe took the game.

Third placers are entitled to a win over tailenders now and then. Manager Jack of Cincinnati admits he will be glad to get away from here. The struggling is too tough for his peace of mind.

The Pirates, who are concluding a crucial series with the Giants this afternoon, may ease up when they report at the Tepee. If they do, the Braves will knock them back, and make the race all over again.

Another Busy Week Ahead for Golfers, Caddy Tournament Tomorrow

By BILL GRIMES

After the strenuous week-end at Bear Hill, Mt. Pleasant, Nashua and the Country Club, the local golfers are right on edge for another hard week.

Down at the Hartford, Ct., Country Club the N. E. P. G. O. and their amateur partners are fighting for the possession of the Larry Paton trophy, which was donated by A. S. Browne, Jr., of the Salem Golf Club. Brownie and Larry were close friends for years. It was to perpetuate the memory of one of the greatest exponents of the game that A. S. Browne, Jr., offered this magnificent trophy.

Bill Grimes

Although the professionals always like to be paired with good amateurs, they have been especially particular in their selections for today.

It has been arranged that they play foursomes and some very good strong combinations have been picked. One of the best looking contests will be between Donald Vinton and his amateur partner, W. O Blaney, against George Aulbach and Billy McPhail. In the straight professional tournament, two weeks ago, at the Charles River Country Club, Vinton and Aulbach tied for the low gross at the end of 36 holes Both Vinton and Aulbach have been getting in a great deal of practise for the Larry Paton trophy tournament and with such partners as Bill Blaney and Bill McPhail should be right at the top of the field this evening.

McPhail and Blaney are two of the finest golfers in the State. McPhail has been going especially well this season, having won more than his share of open tournaments while Blaney has been in the early 70's at the difficult Plymouth course almost every round for weeks.

William Orr, the former Massachusetts open champion, will be accompanied by Loring Coes, from the Worcester Country Club. This pair, from the heart of the Commonwealth, is very strong and with a few breaks will make things interesting for the other teams.

It is only natural that A. S Browne, Jr., is pulling for the Salem team to bring back the trophy to the North Shore, which was the home of Larry Paton during his boyhood days. The Salem Golf Club will be represented by an exceptionally clever pair of golfers in Jack Campbell and Burt Hoxie.

FLATLEY CALLS 'EM

Ruth and Salary
The Fight Fans
Playing the Ponies
An Old-Fashioned Mother

By NICK FLATLEY

MISTER GEORGE HERMAN RUTH is now being threatened with a cut in salary. The owner of the year's most famous stomach ache hasn't been hitting home runs. He isn't pulling crowds in at the gates. So his $52,000 a year is in danger. The Babe has had teeth, an appendix and various other things cut from him, and never chirped a chirp. But shaving the bankroll will cause a loud and plaintive howl.

It is not Mister Ruth's fault that his baseball is so poor, just now. He was chased back into the game long before he had recovered from the effects of his widely advertised operation. He is going into the woods to rest up after the season. He should have been sent there when he escaped from the hospital. But the populace, paying a dollar each as they came, wanted him in that ball game. So in he was sent. Mister Ruth is a hero, but he works for business men.

Nick Flatley

THE large manufacturer of home runs still has a lot of you'ns out in front of him. He will be crowning baseballs for several years yet. He would play the game for the fun of it, if it came to a pinch. He may have to do that. The magnates will forget that he reached the past one when it was decidedly groggy and piteously paging a sailor. Babe Ruth packed ball yards 150 times a year for four years. He made every club in the American League rich. His salary isn't top-heavy and he's entitled to a dab year. The Sultan of Swat dragged at least $10 000 a day through the gate when he was good. His salary share of that was less than $300 Which is not a big percentage when you stop to figure that Dempsey wants $1,000,000 for a fight that may not draw 30 cents more than that.

INDIGNANT fight fans keep writing in letters about that Solomon-Maloney thing. They ARE sore. But they will all be present when the next jam comes off, just the same. The boys who run the battles know that the gang will "take it," and come back always for more. Fight fans are as strange as the birds who play the horses. They cannot quit. We know a dozen young men who drop at least $20 a week chasing the ponies.

THIS recalls a recent debate between Judge Fuchs and Art Fletcher, who manages the Phils. The Judge, claiming that the Braves were better than the Quakers, said the positions of the clubs reminded him of the inmate of the lunatic asylum, who was in the yard looking through the bars. A tattered little man went scurrying along the road.

"Hey," yelled the nut, "where are you going?"

"I just got paid," called back the traveler, "and I can't stop. I have a tip on the third race and just have time to put down a bet."

"Wait a minute," shouted the lunatic. "I'll have 'em open the gates. You belong here instead of me."

A CADDY team in a New Jersey tournament had to withdraw from the championship fight because the star player's mother refused to let him take a trip to the course, which was a few miles away from home. That's so old fashioned in these days of carefree, independent youth that it ought to be on the front pages of the newspapers. It will make a good Sunday School story, and point morals, and all that. The boy, if he is wise, will make a golfer out of his mother. Then he will have no further trouble. And she would add many years to her life.

Ring up another winner for old boy Moe. He socked in his bundle on Route Saturday and gathered. Moe is a bear when it comes to picking the top horse in the big events. Today he is shooting with one that even Lon Collins likes, which makes it a cinch. B. R. $1998.05.

Runyon's Opinion of That Battle

DAMON RUNYON, having read Jack Conway's splendid story of the Braves Field battle in the Boston Evening American, writes in part as follows in the New York American:

The pride of South Boston must have been greatly astonished when he awoke from his sweet dreams of twittering birds and the little old red school house on the hill to find that he had won the fight.

It seems to be rather difficult for King Solomon to take a decision over young Mr. Maloney in Boston, no matter what he does to him. Only recently the noble King outgalloped Maloney by from seven to fifteen lengths, according to the accounts you read, yet Mr. Maloney got the decision.

I personally feel inclined to resent the knocking out of young Mr. Maloney by King Solomon, because it will bring many postal cards and letters to me from the managerial side of The Manly Art of Self Defense saying they told me so. What they told me was that young Mr. Maloney couldn't fight much, whereas I have been contending that he could.

I particularly resent King Solomon knocking him out with a right hand because I have seen King Solomon's right hand, and I did not think he could knock your hat off with it. I do not mind King Solomon knocking young Mr. Maloney cock-eyed with his left hand, because it is a good left hand. But when King Solomon knocks young Mr. Maloney over with his right hand, after the bell, or before it, or even the following day, it gives rise to the suspicion that perhaps young Mr. Maloney cannot "take it," as we say at the club.

I saw Leo Gates knock young Mr. Maloney cuckoo a year or so back, but I put that down to young Mr. Maloney's inexperience. I thought that young Mr. Maloney, in the course of a couple of years careful development, would become one of the best heavyweights in the land.

This thought got me in trouble with young Mr. Maloney's manager, a Mr. McGrath, of Boston. Mr. McGrath attributed my praise of young Mr. Maloney to the most sinister designs. He suspected I was after his fighter, whereas my loving friends, knowing my weakness for heavyweights, leave better prospects than young Mr. Maloney on my doorstep each day.

However, Mr. McGrath's suspicions did not discourage me in my belief in young Mr. Maloney's future. I really thought he had it in him to become a great fighter, despite adverse reports from my operatives among the pugilistic managers. I am not so sure even now that he will not be a great fighter, though that right hand knockout troubles me no little.

In his first fight in the East, against Quentin Romero-Rojas, King Solomon showed speed and willingness that attracted some attention. Then he astonished the pugilistic land by decisively outscoring Ad Stone, the ex-marine.

I saw this fight, and King Solomon convinced me then that I had under-rated him. I did not think he could beat young Mr. Maloney, however. He is, indeed, progressing. I doubt that you could buy King Solomon's contract from Messrs. Woodman and Lawrence for $50,000 just now. He has attained high value since Thursday night.

What young Mr. Maloney is worth at this time is a matter of opinion.

INSIDE GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON

I mentioned in a previous article that the ball could be cut from a sand trap with a niblick by chopping the blade across the ball and taking a slight cut of sand with it, causing the ball to jump a bank some three or four feet high, then run to the pin. Here is a typical shot in which the natural back-spin imparted to the ball by the niblick blade changes to over-spin when the ball hits the green because the ball still has forward energy in it. The correct way to make such a shot is to so hit the ball that it will just clear the embankment, it being assumed in this, of course, that the ball lies back a few feet from the wall. For this shot, also, the blade must be played with its natural lie. If it is fastened down or if the hands are too far forward, causing the blade to lose its natural loft, something else will happen to the ball. Players should always be careful to play the club with its natural lie unless the shot calls for changing it.

Prophesied the World's End

AN English self-styled prophet, Richard Brothers, stirred England by predicting the destruction of the world would take place in 1795. After making other prophecies he was committed to an insane asylum, where he died.

This Day in History

THIS is the anniversary of the massacre of St. Bartholomew, in 1572, when thousands of Protestants were put to death all over France by the Catholic faction under the Duc de Guise. The famous Coligny was a victim.

LOVE'S BLINDNESS By Elinor Glyn

A Gripping Romance--Newest and Best Novel by the Author of "Three Weeks" know for herself what their relations were.

With the coming of dusk she was to be driven in a motor-boat and wearing a dark lace carriage cape she was to sit in the stern, steering and guiding her gorgeous craft. Then she sipped enough to fill about half of the passage and so drive the boat. If she capsized, the lake was shallow enough amongst the lily beds for her to wade ashore and drive sitting astride on the cushions, back to the Hall.

Gerald had arranged all this with the Duchess and Hubert was to remain behind. It was all to be a surprise for the Duke—a surprise indeed for everybody—and the Duchess at her request was to conduct the performance.

Gerald was in a state of excitement. He could not eat his dinner, and when he went to his room to change into his boating clothes he could not keep still. He walked up and down, and looked out of the window, and then he sat down and tried to read a book, but he could not concentrate his mind on the printed page. He was in a fever of impatience for the hour to arrive when he could see Hubert and the Duchess start on their journey.

At last the time came, and he went down to the hall, where he found Hubert and the Duchess waiting for him. They were both dressed in long cloaks, and Hubert carried a basket of provisions.

Gerald was in a state of high excitement. He could not speak, but he pressed Hubert's hand and looked at the Duchess with eyes that were full of love and gratitude.

Hubert helped the Duchess into the boat, and then he went back to the house to get his own cloak and to tell the servants that they were not to wait up for him, as he would be late in returning.

Gerald was standing on the steps of the terrace waiting for him, and as Hubert came out of the house he saw that Gerald was looking very pale and agitated.

"Is anything the matter?" he asked.

"Yes, something is the matter," answered Gerald in a voice that trembled with emotion. "I have just had a telegram from Paris. My wife is dying, and she implores me to go to her at once. I must start by the midnight train. I have ordered the motor to be ready in half an hour. I am sorry to disappoint you, but you will understand that I cannot help myself."

Hubert was overwhelmed with astonishment. He could not believe that Gerald was in earnest, and he thought that he must be joking. But he was soon convinced that Gerald was speaking the truth, and he was filled with consternation.

"I am very sorry," he said, "but I am afraid that you will not be able to get a train before the morning. You had better wait and start by the motor-car at daybreak."

Gerald agreed to this, and Hubert went back to the boat and told the Duchess that Gerald was unable to accompany them, and that they must start without him.

The Duchess was very much disappointed when she heard that Gerald was not going with them, but she was not suspicious of Hubert's motives, and she thought that Gerald was really obliged to go to Paris.

Hubert helped the Duchess into the boat, and then he pushed off from the shore and began to row.

The Duchess sat in the stern, steering the boat, and Hubert sat in the middle, facing her. He rowed slowly and carefully, for he knew that the Duchess was not a good steersman, and he was afraid that she might run the boat into the bank.

When they had gone about a mile from the shore Hubert stopped rowing and looked at the Duchess. She was sitting with her head bent down, and Hubert could see that she was crying.

"Why are you crying?" he asked.

"Because I am so unhappy," she answered. "I am afraid that Gerald's wife is very ill, and I am afraid that he will not come back to me. I am afraid that I shall never see him again."

"Do not say that," said Hubert. "I am sure that he will come back to you very soon. I am sure that his wife will soon get well, and then he will return to you."

"I am afraid that you do not understand," she said. "I am afraid that you do not know that I love Gerald with all my heart and soul, and that I cannot live without him."

Hubert looked at her with astonishment. He could not believe that she was in earnest, but he saw that she was crying bitterly, and he knew that she was speaking the truth.

"Do you love Gerald?" he asked.

"Yes, I love him," she answered. "I love him with all my heart and soul, and

UNIV. OF VERMONT HAS HARD SEASON AHEAD

AVAILABLE VETERANS ARE FEW

W. J. McAvoy, New Head Coach, Expects 40 Candidates to Report Sept. 8

By EDDIE DONDERO

With most of the stars who have made the football teams of the University of Vermont danger spots in the schedules of the larger colleges now graduated or ineligible, the arrival of W. J. McAvoy to take up his new duties as head coach at the opening of Fall training camp September 8 is engaging the attention of football fans.

On the surface the Green and Gold does not appear like to give any too stiff opposition to Dartmouth, Brunswick, Holy Cross, St. Louis and the other powerful combinations on the schedule. The Fearless mentor, who has unquestionably championed Northern New England in the field of late has fallen upon hard days. June after June graduation and eligibility rules have taken their toll until now few of the stars remain.

This Fall the team will miss the services of "Rusty" Yarnall, one of the best athletes Vermont has had in years, letter man in the three major sports, baseball, basketball and football. "Art" Burns, last year's captain and a bulk of strength against the heavier opponents has played his four years. "Penny" Law too whose punts no coach always be counted upon for a little gain, is out of college, and a number of the freshmen who looked good last Fall have left college or run up against trouble in their studies.

So all can be expected from the members of the incoming freshman class, for last Fall a "one semester" rule went into effect which bars freshmen and new students from participation in varsity athletics until they have passed at least a half-year's courses satisfactorily.

Kaplan Seeks Win by Kayo

Kid Kaplan, crowned world's featherweight champion by the generous New York Boxing Commission, will strive for a knockout when he tackles Babe Herman at Waterbury, Ct., on Thursday night.

KAPLAN TO RISK TITLE IN BOUT WITH HERMAN

By SID MERCER.

On Thursday night at Waterbury, Ct., there will be a fistic duel for the featherweight championship of the world.

Kid Kaplan, a native of the Nutmeg State will defend the title against Babe Herman, formerly of California and now of New York.

It is the biggest thing in a boxing way that Connecticut has harbored since Young Corbett knocked out Terrible Terry McGovern.

That happened on Thanksgiving Day, 1901, nearly a quarter of a century ago. So Connecticut is entitled to make a fuss over Kaplan and Herman.

Neither Corbett nor McGovern belong to Connecticut. The former was from Denver and McGovern was a Brooklyn boy. They chose Hartford as a battleground because boxing was then under the ban in New York.

DAILY SHORT STORY

"SIR"

By Lenore Neely Cook

AMONG his associates, Lorrin MacNulty was known as a power—a 'force.' He had character, they said. He had a way, too, of getting what he wanted. He could wheedle consent to his way from men, and dollars from those same men's pockets. And with it all they liked him and looked up to him.

At home also his power was in evidence. Emily and George, his daughter and son, and Lou, his wife—they all felt it. They could be chatting happily together until the man who was a 'power' appeared. Then their faces assumed a strained expression that nothing save Lorrin MacNulty's absence would banish.

Avoiding Him

When he asked his daughter a question, she answered very politely as if speaking before an audience, and she always said 'sir' to everything. He noticed also that she got away from him as quickly as possible.

"Emily, where are you going?" he demanded one evening as he saw her tiptoeing through the room as if slipping out.

She was breathing fast when she answered, "I m just going down the street to a movie, sir!" she faltered as she waited in suppressed excitement as if for the executioner.

"All right," he grunted. He noted her relaxation, saw her running from the room as if from a terror, heard her gay chatter in the next room with her mother. And Lorrin MacNulty sighed, wondering why it was that other men's daughters made chums of them and fussed over them. These other daughters didn't flee their father's presence as if he were a pestilence. They waited eagerly for his home-coming and planned their vacations with him as if he were a jolly friend.

But Lorrin MacNulty was never taken into the confidence of Emily and George. George was getting to the age where he needed his father, too. Lorrin realized that, and it worried him, but still he didn't know what the trouble was. He swelled with pride when he realized that of all the children he knew, his were the only ones who said "sir" to their father. Perhaps it was better after all to have this show of respect. His Emily and his George did respect him. No one could doubt that.

Spoke About It

He spoke about it one night to his little wife, Lou, after the children had retired.

"George worries me," he began. "I wonder where he goes so much at night and whom he is with." He was removing one shoe as he talked.

Lou's hand fluttered about her hair as she braided it for the night. "I think George is all right, dear," she assured him nervously. "Don't bother about him."

If Lorrin had made the keen study of his wife as he did of his business associates, he would have known instantly that she was hiding something, that everything was terribly wrong. But his time had been spent for the past twenty-five years in studying men's weakness for profit. It had never occured to him that a study of his family might yield even greater profit.

So he allowed the matter to drop and bending, removed the other shoe, massaging his foot slowly.

He dropped into dreamless sleep after a bit. He didn't know that Lou tossed till early morning on her little bed and he didn't hear the gentle knocking on the door that came about two in the morning.

Lou Heard It

Lou heard it, though. She had seemed to lie awake listening for it. She rose like a thief and stole out into the hall. Emily was there wrapped in a frail silken negligee that her father's great business ingenuity had purchased for her.

"Is he asleep?" she asked in a loud whisper.

After her mother nodded speechlessly, she went on, "He hasn't come in yet—George isn't in his room. . ." Her wild eyes sought her mother's in the gloom.

Her mother laid tremulous hands upon her, clinging as she would have protection from her daughter.

"We can't let father know," went on the girl. "He would throw a fit, I guess."

"No, no, we can't tell your father, dear," Lou's voice was almost a sob. "What put such an idea into your head—we must think of something else we can do."

"We will have to let the police know," decided Emily suddenly. It seemed strange that her mother should be leaning upon her like this. Emily helped her down the stairs and to the telephone. She was quite calm now for her eighteen years. She would have to hide her worry, for mother was depending upon her.

Called the Police

It was Emily who called the police station and poured out her fears into the sergeant's ear. George hadn't come home and there was a certain thing that had threatened him. No, she would rather not say just why unless it was necessary. "All right, miss," boomed the big voice at the other end of the line. "We will let you know as soon as anything turns up."

Emily repeated the conversation to her distracted mother.

"And now you must go back to bed, Mummy, and I'll stay up and wait for the call." She was leading Lou toward the steps as she spoke. Just before Lou opened the door to her bedroom, she put her arms about Emily. "How I wish your father were different—if only George would have told him what he told me!" she sobbed. Emily went back into the living room and curled up in a chair. She didn't intend to go to sleep but it crept upon her and embraced her in spite of herself. She was awakened with a start four hours later. The light of day was streaming in the windows and her father was standing over her. She shuddered a little and drew the flimsy negligee that her father had bought her about her shoulders.

He noticed the action and it aroused his anger. "What have you been doing here asleep?" he demanded as he stood over her.

Emily had just awakened and her brain was befogged with sleep. "I-I-I—" she hesitated in confusion.

Lorrin MacNulty looked at her suspiciously. "I'd like to know what's going on around this house," he boomed. "I know less about my own children than a lot of strangers do—now tell me, Emily . . ."

Just then the telephone bell rang impatiently and Emily jumped to answer it. But a thick arm shot out and seized her. "No you don't," said her father's stern voice. "I'll find out the secret of all of this—"

Sank Into Chair

She sank limply into her chair. She saw the figure of her mother, pale and agitated in the doorway, heard her father's gruff voice over the telephone.

"I think there is some mistake," he was saying. "This is Lorrin MacNulty speaking——" There was silence again while he listened to the voice on the other end, and Emily pulled her mother to a chair. "The hell you say—hey, wait a minute——" Lorrin clicked the receiver viciously but there was no response.

His face was pale when he joined the other two in the living room. "Now what is all this about, anyway? —George was found lying in an alley beaten unconscious and is now in the hospital—"

Lou gave a little whimper and fainted.

"Get me some water, quick!" shouted Emily in her father's face. He obeyed her, suddenly docile. He might have seen a little of his own dominant spirit shining from her eyes.

"Now you'd better get the car—mother will want to go to the hospital . . . " she commanded as she bathed the pale face.

Lorrin MacNulty's face was working strangely as he looked on.

Must Hurry

"You are a dear daddy," she said impulsively. A startled look came into his eyes and he seized her to him suddenly. The child hadn't been so sweet to him since she was a little thing and begged for stories on his knee.

"Now, we must hurry and get away," said Emily, again business like.

In the car a few minutes later Emily told her father all about the trouble. She had lost her fear of him. Here he was between her and mother, an arm holding them close and tears glistening in his eyes.

"And why didn't you tell me before that George was mixed up in this?" he asked Lou gently. She looked at him and tried to speak but Emily was the one who told him the truth.

"We were afraid to tell you, father, afraid of you——" she looked him calmly in the eye. "You never seemed to be interested in what we did. We didn't suppose you would understand——"

He drew them both to his shoulder, "I don't blame you at all, my dears. You were right. I wouldn't have understood, yet I was and am, interested in what you do—vitally. I wanted to be chums with my children. You don't know how I envied other fathers." His strong voice grew husky and Emily saw the unshed tears in his eyes. "Kiss me again, Emily," he begged.

"See what did you do to dad?" asked George a few days later when he came home. "He's a beer."

"Yes, he is," agreed Emily vigorously. "He's a wonderful pal, too. I wish I had known it long ago. How I used to envy other girls," she said sadly.

"He paid all my debts," continued George. "And said to forgive him, that it was his fault for not being a better father. And he asked me not to call him 'sir.'"

Join the Game for Sport and Profit--Fill In Blanks--Eight Prizes Given

HAVE you hit the bullseye yet for a prize in new "funnies" contest of the greater Boston Evening American?

The eight fortunate persons whose humorous remarks were considered the funniest received for "wordless comic" No. 2 are listed at the end of this article. Does your name grace the list? If not, try again. Keep plugging and you'll land one of the prizes, we feel certain. Persistency brings results, you know.

Hundreds of New Englanders continue to enjoy the new pastime. Just think of it, fans, 382 persons participated in the race for prizes on No. 2 comic. And don't forget that they did so during some of the hottest weather of the season. All of which means that this new contest is taking hold in earnest. Wierd 393 persons forget the heat long enough to compose original funny remarks for a comic strip it certainly must be interesting.

As in the case of "wordless comic" No. 1, the Judges had a big task to decide on the winners. That New England contains plenty of witty and "funny" people is the conclusion the Judges arrived at after scanning the No. 2 comics.

Let's talk about the present, however. Table today's "wordless funny," for instance! What do you think of it? Isn't it a "humdinger"? Isn't it rich in possibilities? Just get your mind busy and we know the result will staggger the judges. Think of little Willie ballroom going to the Chink's to get his clean dad's for wear that same evening, only to open the bundle and find dazzling undies for the fair sex? We expect to be flooded with hundreds of cleverly worded completions of this comic strip.

Don't forget the daily prizes. They are, first, $5; second, $3; third, $2, and five of $1 each.

A WIFE'S MEDITATIONS

By Helen Rowland.

THE man who tries to drive a car with one arm and make love with the other is either too foolhardy to be trusted, or too skilful to be convincing.

* * *

The tragedy of a woman's life is that she is constantly finding a man who is "different," only to discover that he's "just like all the rest."

Helen Rowland

Sometimes, a man actually enjoys doing the things that are good for him; but they don't give him half the thrill that they would, if they were labeled "Dangerous" or "Keep Off."

* * *

Divorce may sometimes be a necessary surgical operation; but, like most surgical operations, it leaves a scar and you are SO long recuperating from the effects of the shock and the anaesthetic.

* * *

A wife is the "innocent bystander," who always gets hit, when her husband starts fooling with fire-arms, or experimenting with his "deadly fascination" for the tender sex.

Philosophy is what makes a woman think of herself as "just a little too plump," when she tips the scales at a hundred and sixty, and a man thinks of himself as "slightly overweight," when he lets his belt out to fifty-two.

* * *

No matter how much valuable advice the doctor and philosophers may dish out about "the Ideal Age at which to marry," girls will go right on marrying when they can manage it—and the men, when they can't escape!!

* * *

The modern girl's problem is no longer whether or not to LET a man kiss her, but how to MAKE him kiss her.

* * *

Some men are born pessimists, some assume pessimism—and some marry literary women!

Many a husband is merely the "Sunday Supplement" to the household, which reminds the family that another week has gone around.

* * *

Every woman hopes to "fill a niche" in a man's life—but the niche she dreams of is a shrine, not a stop-gap between two flirtations.

* * *

Real love is the safe and quiet harbor which a man never seeks until he has skirted the coast of adventure; marriage, the dry dock into which he permits himself to be towed, after he is weary of "seeing the world."

SECRETS OF HEALTH

By Charles A. L. Reed, M. D.

Former President of the American Medical Association.

YOU possibly live, or sometimes visit, where those nocturnal pests, mosquitos, interfere with your tranquility by their penetrating song or even more penetrating bite.

If you have followed the rapid development of mosquito literature you may have some mental discomfort growing out of an apprehension that the mosquitos that thus bite you are depositing within your skin the germs of some dread disease.

You have heard about one kind of mosquito that carries malaria and of another kind that carries yellow fever and of still other kinds that carry other diseases.

Yellow fever has come so nearly under control, has been so nearly banished from the earth by the triumph of science, that it has ceased to be a matter of concern in the daily lives of the people of this country.

Malaria has likewise been largely brought under control until it, too, has ceased to be a matter of concern except in certain uncontrolled areas.

It is not necessary, therefore—it is indeed unjustifiable—to bother yourself about such possible results from mosquito bites.

The little night time pests that infest our average cities and villages and even farming districts are not carriers of disease.

It is, however, needless to say that they are very annoying and at certain times, especially in certain persons, they lead to very uncomfortable consequences.

The best thing to do about mosquito bites is to avoid them, and the best way to avoid them is to drain all pools of water within 200 yards of the house. This stops the breeding and deals with the mischief at its source.

There are certain things that mosquitos don't like and will generally give a wide berth if you use them. Have your druggist make up for you a mixture of one dram of menthol, one ounce oil of citronella, one ounce spirits of camphor, half ounce oil of cedar. Apply this to all exposed surfaces to keep the mosquitos away.

It also tends to minimize the annoyance from bites if applied immediately after they are received.

MEDDLESOME CHILDREN

By Lucy Lowell

THAT Bailey boy has been up to mischief again.

On the day—the very selfsame day, mind you—that Pa Bailey brought home the car from the repair shop—and those mechanics soaking you right and left every time they turn over a wrench, says Pa—what did that young'un do but sneak out to the garage and pry open the hood.

Then he started in on the car's innards, and what he accomplished was a crime. How he managed it Pa can't guess. And it's a wonder he didn't short circuit the wires and kill himself, which maybe would have taught him a lesson, the young imp!

"It's a destructive little heathen," Pa growled, as he finished exercising his open palm upon the seat of the young-un's pants. "You'd expect more from a big boy of six. And I am going to take it out of him you bet. Let me catch him around that garage again!"

Remember the time you climbed up the wall and pulled the clock to pieces? Remember how bewildered you were at what happened afterward—your dad's anger and the paddling he gave you?

Of course, you wrecked his clock. But that wasn't what you set out to do, was it?

Certainly not. You were hunting around amongst the wheels and springs and things TO FIND OUT WHAT MADE IT GO!

You had no intention of destroying. You merely were INVESTIGATING!

Doesn't that mean something to you when you think of that Bailey boy and the others like him who always are doing things that make folks call them destructive?

I think it does. I think it proves they're filled with a perfectly normal and laudable curiosity. They want to know what makes things go. That shows they think. Because they think, they are traveling in the right direction, no matter how much wreckage they leave along the way!

There's a remedy for children's so-called destructiveness. Instead of letting them pull cars and clocks and such articles to pieces, give them mechanical toys to play with. From these they may learn mechanical construction and find out for themselves what makes things go!

WE OFTEN WONDER

What is the plural of pants?

If a cross-word puzzle isn't a press agent stunt by the pencil and eraser companies?

Which is the bottom of a bass drum?

What happens to the chicken in chicken hash?

Why the fellow who tells us "we're looking fine," right afterward asks us for a loan.

Why they don't spell Schenectady with a K?

Why they don't use moths to make holes in doughnuts and Swiss cheese?

Why people give a lot of old things they don't need and call it charity?

Why the men who write history seldom have anything to do with making it?

FINDS GERMAN SHIPPING IS NO MENACE

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor

Howard F. Beebe, Harris, Forbes partner, who has just come back from Germany, where he has been making investigations in connection with his firm's forthcoming offering of an $8,700,000 Munich loan, tells me he does not look upon growth of German shipping as a menace.

• • •

"Even before the World War," he explains, "the profits made by German shipping were not so large as generally thought. A goodly proportion of the profits came from subsidies rather than from operations."

• • •

I understand the Munich loan will be offered on a very attractive basis not yet announced. It will be watched with the greatest interest, as it is the first big German municipal financing since Germany started out with a stabilized currency.

The writer is told that Jesse L. Lasky of the Famous Players-Lasky Co. may turn some of his talents from the motion field to the automobile industry. It was learned today that he has just acquired a large block of stock of the Audet Manufacturing Co., of Williamsport, Pa. whose shares were recently listed on the Consolidated Stock Exchange. H. L. Salsbury of Mr. Lasky's company is a director of the Audet Company which, among other motor appliances manufactures a collapsible tire rim which is said to eliminate the one remaining inconvenient feature of the modern auto. The rim has been approved for purchase by the War Department and the Tire & Rim Association of America. It is stated.

Dillon, Read Co. says: "On the basis of $16,487,891 net earnings available for Federal Taxes and Bond Interest, Dodge is earning at the annual rate of $23 a share, or in excess of four times dividend requirements on its outstanding $7 Preference Stock. For the first six months of 1924 such earnings were $9,111,095, against which the earnings for the same period of 1925 show an increase of $1 per cent. in every year during the past five—with one exception—Dodge Brothers earnings have been greater in the second half of the year. Dodge Brothers, Inc. $7 Preference Stock is listed on the New York Stock Exchange and is currently selling around $83 a share. At this price it yields over $ 40 per cent. We recommend this security as being a desirable addition to any investment list."

Nearly $100,000,000 in mortgage bonds on building construction throughout the United States will be guaranteed by surety companies this year, says Philip W. Kniskern, vice-president of National Surety Co. Surety companies expect to guarantee between $900,000,000 and $400,000,000 in mortgage bonds next year, he declares, and will ultimately be underwriting a billion dollars annually.

I hear that some rather striking changes in Ford models will be announced soon, and that the cars will be obtainable not alone in the conventional black, but also in colors.

CALUMET WILL MAKE UNITS LARGER

Furnace improvements at Calumet & Hecla Consolidated's smelter, involving construction of a large melting furnace and enlargement of one of two other big units, are nearing completion.

A notable saving in smelter costs will be effected through modernization of the plant, confining all operations to the three units.

The furnaces under construction, which will be used exclusively for melting, leaving the other two for refining, will melt enough mineral to provide a capacity of approximately 12,000,000 pounds of refined copper per month, sufficient to handle the production of all Calumet & Hecla properties.

The three furnaces will use pulverized fuel, which will contribute to lower costs.

EXPLANATION EASY, HOWEVER STOCKS GO

In seeking explanations to account for the upturn in the stock market, Wall Street recently has shown a disposition to base all its comparisons of trade figures with those of a year ago rather than with conditions prevailing earlier in the year.

The results of this procedure have been to show business up in favorable light, but many in the financial district are aware that a bear movement could as easily produce the statistics to explain a decline in prices, such as the smaller '25 wheat crop, the cut in daily steel output and the smaller total of unfilled tonnage as compared with the spring months.

Consolidated balance sheet of The North American Company as of June 30, made public today, shows surplus and reserves totalling $75,723,283, an increase of $13,530,429 over June 30, 1924.

RAIL EARNINGS OUTLOOK MENACES FORMER RECORD

Maintenance of freight traffic at unusually high levels, coupled with a recent series of favorable financial reports by the carriers, has inspired estimates in the financial district that railway earnings for 1925 will closely approach the record of $1,400,000,000 established in 1913. Profits for the second half of the year are expected to be much larger than for the first six months, when net operating income of the Class 1 railroads totalled $437,668,357.

Woman Sustains, Guides and Controls the World

Of all events here on earth the greatest is the birth of a baby. Great battles are fought, won and lost. Nations and religions rise and fall. Great cities flourish today, and tomorrow the sand lies heavy over them. And of all these events the eternal Niagara of new babies is the first and essential foundation.

He knows little of real life, its greatest happiness, deepest devotion, intensest suffering, who has never witnessed the arrival of a new human being in this life of progress and struggle.

There lies the new baby at last, its black face gradually turning pink, its first gasping breaths changing the color of its blood, its tiny fists opening and closing—reaching out for nourishment already, its face tying itself into the first philosophical, cosmos interrogating knot. Its feet turn inward and its legs are crooked.

Its head is so shapeless as to discourage anyone but a mother; it has three years of gurgling, ten years of childhood, ten years of foolishness, ten years of vanity—and possibly a few years of real usefulness ahead of it.

Some one must be patient, hopeful, interested, proud, never discouraged, always devoted, through all these years.

That "some one," the mother, lies there weak and white on the bed.

Her forehead and all her body are wet with agony—but she thinks no longer of that.

She has heard her baby's first cry, and whether it be her first or her tenth the feeling is the same. Her feeble, outstretched arms and her hollow, loving eyes are turned toward the helpless little creature.

Those arms and that love will never desert it as long as the mother shall live.

The mother's weak hand supports the heavy, dull baby head and guides it to its rest on her breast.

And that hand which supports the head of the new-born baby, the mother's hand, supports the civilization of the world.

Federal Aid Against Dope

Congress to Be Asked for Appropriation to Cure the Addicts

In expert study of the drug evil in America it has been recognized that the "dope" addict is the one who really keeps this traffic alive.

It is the addict whose craving for narcotics creates the economic demand for more and more opium and morphine and cocaine.

It is the addict whose dollars support the elaborate chain of illicit pedlars, wholesalers, importers and "runners" across the oceans and across the borders, who flood our country with "dope."

It is the addict, driven by his abnormal appetite, who steals to buy drugs and who commits a huge percentage of the petty thefts of the nation. It is the addict of today who supports the whole system which, in turn, creates new addicts tomorrow. Since there are about four millions addicts in this country, the problem becomes a serious one.

Believing that, if addiction be abolished or reduced, the whole narcotic traffic will be undermined at its foundation, Senator Shortridge of California is planning to elicit Federal aid.

Legislation is to be proposed under which the Federal government will appropriate $5,000,000 for the cure of addicts.

It will go, dollar for dollar, to those States which already are active in addiction-cure. It will double the efficacy of the efforts of those States, and at the same time will tempt other States to enter the health-crusade.

"Abolish the addict and you abolish the drug evil," is an inspiring slogan, and while thorough-going success is perhaps unattainable for humankind, it is entirely possible that such an appropriation would starve out the drug-ring in part, and boost the price of narcotics so high that the rest of the structure would fall of itself.

Laying 36,000 Bricks a Day

Interesting, but Destructive

All the newspapers tell about James Brown of Kansas City, who lays 36,000 bricks in a day. He doesn't lay them in a WALL of course; no human being could do that. His job is laying bricks on the flat surface of a brick highway.

This man, an Indian, former football player in Carlyle School, keeps two men smoothing the road ahead of him, and five men supplying the bricks as he lays them. He makes $16 in eight hours.

You hear a good deal about "union labor criminally cutting down the AMOUNT of a day's work." Such men as James Brown, the lightning bricklayer, make it NECESSARY for unions to fix a maximum as a day's work.

In old days, when the unions were feeble, men like James Brown, called "rushers," were hired to lay bricks. They were frequently paid an extra secret wage, and other men, fearful of losing their jobs, were compelled to exhaust themselves trying to keep up with them.

That necessitated and JUSTIFIED the fixing of a maximum day.

It is important to lay plenty of bricks, important also to protect men against the exploitation of selfish employers.

Just now, in some cases, the pendulum has gone the other way, and many workmen, especially in Great Britain, injure themselves by doing far less than a fair day's work for a good day's pay.

LISTEN, WORLD!

Reg. U. S. Patent Office

By Elsie Robinson.

HAVE you ever been a meek and lowly worm scrveling beneath every random heel and sobbing miserably over Fate's harsh treatment? YES, YOU HAVE. Don't contradict me. You KNOW you have. We all have.

Once in every human life there comes the Worm Stage. Once at least we spend months or years to sliming around and getting stepped upon. Some of us never snap out of it, but most of us manage eventually to rear our battered length on end and grow spines.

But if we're honest we never quite forget the pressure of the heel. I'm saying these personal things so you won't act too sniffy when you read the following letter:

"Dear Miss Robinson:

"I am twenty-two years old. I live with my father and mother. We have a lovely home. There are five of us besides my father and mother. I have a fine position in a lawyer's office. All this sounds as if I ought to be awfully happy, doesn't it, Miss Robinson? But I am not, and this is why: I am engaged to a fine young man. At least I thought he was fine when I got engaged to him, but now I'm not so sure.

All Her Life

"I have known this man all my life. He is three years older than I. He owns a garage and is very honest and hard working. We were to be married next April, but lately I can't seem to make up my mind to go through with it. Every one points out things in him that I am afraid I won't like.

"I don't want you to think that I have a quarrelsome, unkindly family. They are not. They like Edwin, too, but naturally they want me to be happy, so they point out little things that they think might make me unhappy.

"For instance, he is very awkward. He is always knocking things over. My younger brother draws well, and he is always drawing pictures of Edwin knocking things over. Maybe that seems a little thing to you, but I keep wondering how it would be to go through life with such a clumsy man.

"And lately there is another young man who makes things even harder. He is a young lawyer. He came to see my sister first, but now every one knows that I am the one he comes to see. He is so handsome, Elsie, and such a wonderful dancer. He is always saying lovely things to me and wanting to take me to the swellest places.

"Lately we have had some long talks and he has tried to make me see how foolish I am to throw myself away on a man like Edwin. He says Edwin will never understand me, and although I love Edwin with all my heart, I am afraid he is right. Edwin does things every day that hurt me, and never seems to notice, and this other man seems to understand without a word just how I feel about everything.

So you want another person's opinion to tangle things still more badly for you? Poor, unhappy, little E. L.! Can't you see that that is the root of your whole trouble—this foolish dependence of yours on WHAT SOMEONE THINKS? You feel that Fate is treating you very badly. Fate isn't treating you badly, you're treating yourself badly. You're double-crossing yourself. You were given a life to live, opportunities to grasp, decisions to make, and a mind wherewith to perform the job.

Do Own Thinking

AND AS LONG AS YOU PERMIT OTHER PEOPLE TO DIRECT YOUR LIFE, YOU'RE GOING TO KNOW THE SAME DISCONTENT. E. L. You're not going to to be happy in any home or career or with any man. Deep in your heart, poising your whole life, will be the consciousness of your betrayal of your own spirit. That isn't a healthy thing to have in any life, my dear.

So buck up and do your own thinking, Pal. Take a chance! Run a risk! Begin to know the pride and thrill of making your own decisions. Will you make some wrong decisions? Of course you will. Lots of them. But the most foolish decision you may make will never give you such a secret shame and irritation as your present cowardice and treachery.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

DREAM, O My Soul, of the perfect things, things you would clasp and keep, lifting the spirit on airy wings into the sky's blue deep. There would be hope and a deathless trust shining through darkest days, there would be faith that could mock at the dust, there would be love always. Dream, O My Soul, of the perfect things wrought of the deep desire; only by dreaming the roamer brings God to his spirit's dreamer's own; fuller joys as earth onward swings, vision far clearer ground. Only by dreams can you reach at last heights that are far away; only by dreams can you leave the past, seeking fresh fields today. Dream, O My Soul, of the perfect things, wrought of the deep desire; only by dreaming the roamer brings God to his spirit's

MEDBURY SAYS---

By John P. Medbury

THIS is the time of year when women who used to find their husbands in saloons are now dragging them out of drug stores.

SODA fountains are ruining more men than bar rooms.

LIQUOR never cost half as much as the fancy drinks you get now-a-days, and besides, you knew what you were drinking.

IT'S surprising what the modern drug store can do with a strawberry.

ONE man went up to a soda fountain the other evening and told the clerk to give him a glass of root beer with a cake of soap in it.

HE said he wanted to be able to blow the suds off the top.

SODA fountains wouldn't be quite so bad if the proprietors would only put swinging doors on them.

THE floors should also be decorated. There are hundreds of well known skulls in this country from which we could get plenty of saw-dust.

OWNERS of ice cream parlors ought to put little obstructions near the doorway for the customers to trip over. The men would then get the idea that they were falling out of the place.

SOME proprietors seem to think that they can make their place popular by hiring beautiful waitresses. They're foolish. A man never used to go into a saloon to look at the bartender.

THE bartenders may have been congenial, but they very seldom ever won any beauty contests.

SWELL looking dames are all right, but a pretty face isn't going to quench a man's thirst.

WHEN a fellow's throat is parched he wants to drink, not rubber.

A BARTENDER used to be interested in your tales of woe, but a waitress hasn't got time to listen to your troubles.

IF you have troubles, you should take them to your manicurist.

BESIDES, there are just as many good drinks in a barber shop as there are at a soda fountain.

YOU can get a pint of tonic and then buy a haircut for a chaser.

BUT drug stores and tonsorial parlors are now in the same class. Both of them are effeminate.

HOW THE DERBY BEGAN

By Mark Stuyvesant

"THEY'RE off! They're off!"

The entire grandstand, a riot of color, becomes electrified. Staid, dignified men are standing up in their seats, waving their hats and screaming wildly.

Women in gay, modish costumes are waving their handkerchiefs or the colors of their horse, or banners, or whatever happens to be at hand. Children barely old enough to understand what the commotion is all about, add to the noise and confusion by jumping up and down and screaming in shrill trebles.

There comes that breath-taking moment when the leading favorites are neck and neck. A deep silence falls as the horses kick the dust from under their feet, and thousands hold their breath. Step by step, one horse noses out the other.

King's English has passed Lord Jeffrey again. But look! Who is this mare that is suddenly stealing the lead? It is Mayday. She is steadily gaining on the favorite; now she's ahead. "Come on, old Mazie! Hurrah! Hurrah!—Mayday's won."

This scene, with little variation, is enacted day after day, and year after year. Yet always people are thrilled by a horse race. But there is one raised almost to the point of hysteria. This is at the annual Derby held at Epsom Downs, Surrey, England, on the Wednesday after Trinity Sunday of each year.

Racing existed in England from the time of Charles I., according to Clarendon, who in his "History of the Rebellion," says:

"A meeting of the Royalists (1648) was held on Banstead Downs under the pretence of a horse race, and six hundred horses were collected and sent to Reigate." (Banstead Downs included much of Epsom Downs).

After the Restoration, racing again became a popular sport, but it was not until 1780, during the reign of George III. that it became the national institution it now is. In that year Lord Derby instituted a race for three-year-old colts, mares or stallions. This race aroused so much interest that it became an organized event and rapidly gained the honor of being the greatest racing day in England. In 1872, Colonel M. Lewis Clark of Kentucky, the founder of the Louisville Jockey Club, visited England. There he studied the system of stakes and the racing rules and methods of the country which made of racing a national pastime.

During his visit to England, Colonel Clark became so imbued with the enthusiasm of Derby Day that he decided to fashion an American Derby Day in the pattern of the English. In 1875 his plans took material shape in the form of a horse race similar to those then run in England.

MONUMENT PLANNED TO BILL NYE

By DR. FRANK CRANE

A MOVEMENT is on in Fletcher, North Carolina, close to Asheville, to dedicate a monument to the name and fame of Bill Nye. There will be appropriate exercises and a boulder and tablet at his grave in the churchyard will be set up.

Bill Nye was a fun maker. He never contributed anything to his country or his fellow citizens except good humor.

As Arnold Bennett said of a certain character in his writing, "He cheered us up a bit."

All he had was his style. He could say things in a way that made people smile. But we are mistaken if we suppose that style is a fleeting gift. All there is to Shakespeare is his style, and the basis of the reputation of Homer and Horace rests more than anything else.

The monuments of the past have crumbled into decay. The mausoleums and other proud edifices are gone, but the stories told by Horace, the poetic wanderer along the forum, are today upon the desk of every school boy in the world.

Style is like flavor. You can weigh an apple and then if you take its flavor from it you might weight it again and the difference would be imperceptible. The odor of the rose seems to be a small thing, yet this rare and delicate fragrance is transmitted from generation to generation and is somehow locked up in every seed or slip.

We pass this way but once and the best we can do is to cheer up the lot of our fellow men as we are passing. We can make the world smile with us or weep with us.

Surely the lot of one who caused gladness and happiness while he was upon earth is to be envied and the grave of such a one should be properly decorated. Bill Nye is gone, but his successors remain to cheer up the world. This vale of tears is sad enough what with pessimists and realists. We sadly need the assistance of those whose gifts lie in the way of the imagination and of talent to relieve the constant humdrum situation.

THE HUMAN MIRACLE OF SCIENCE

By Garrett P. Serviss

Noted Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

IT has come in our time, and we should be hard to please, if we were not satisfied with the privilege of living in this age.

What was Plato's time, or Cicero's, or Bacon's, to ours? Philosophy is like a grandfather's talk murmuring from the deep chair by the chimney-piece. It runs on unceasing, unchanging, monotonous; impressive to be sure, and inspiring respect, but putting no thrill into life. Philosophy has existed full grown from the beginning; its nature, bases, and principles never change. It has no need of any miracle.

But science has always had the need. Science is only a youth. Man was born with philosophy, but science he has created. It has grown slowly, with much effort, its great miracle flitting unattained ahead of it through the centuries; but now suddenly standing present, achieved. It has come like the sun on the equator, bounding above the horizon.

Growth by Science

What is this human miracle? It is not the liberation of the mental faculties, the development of theoretical knowledge, the rise of mathematics, the discovery of the universe—all of which are a part and an outgrowth of philosophy—but the miracle consists in the rapid transformation of life here below by the practical application of science.

Call it mere mechanics, if you like. No matter, nothing has ever reacted more mightily upon the intellectual and moral world.

Up to yesterday its progress was like that of a glacier, perceptible only by special measurements. Nobody supposed that the grip of the glacier on its rocky channel was giving way under the strain; but suddenly it broke loose and became an avalanche. Try to look back a few years and see the coming of the miracle—in only one of its phases—human flight.

Today, sitting under the trees, I hear a roar skyward, and glancing up I see a great mechanical bird carrying men and women high over the hills, close to the clouds, hurrying with amazing speed from city to city. It surpasses nobody; even the swallows are indifferent, more interested in insects than in aeroplanes.

Over all of the continents and some of the oceans man is flying. It is Pegasus the flying horse, suddenly coming out of the age of gods-like-men (who were imaginary) into the age of men-like-gods (who are real). Philosophy in its mythological mood satisfied the miracle, but science only could perform it.

Think of it! Only some six years after our American Wright made Europe rubs its incredulous eyes as he flew under the eaves of the Pyrenees, and Bleriot awoke England like an ant's nest poked with a stick by flying across the English Channel and alighting with his monoplane as gracefully as a butterfly on the lofty cliffs of Dover, the nations were making war with airships!

And now we have post routes, tourist routes, passenger and freight routes, laid out in the blue roof of the world. It has become almost too commonplace to be spoken of or written about. The announcement of an Amundsen trip to the moon would not now greatly astonish some people. Enthusiastic volunteers would be found ready.

Already some are asking why could it not be done. Imagination is leading the way, as it did before.

But human flight is only a part of the sudden miracle. We do not have to consult history to learn when man began to speak and to sing across the seas and over the mountains, and to make his voice audible around the world. It all lies within our own experience. And still the avalanche of wonder is coming down upon us.

Like a God

This same fortunate generation has seen the birth and development of the automobile. Nobody before us had experienced the thrill of skimming on a steel rail, and onward and upward to the mountain tops, with the speed of the wind.

The man at the wheel feels himself to be kind of god. His finger has become a magician's wand, and with a touch of it he controls nature. He would hardly be surprised if, by putting on a little more power as he comes to the crest of the hill, he could make the machine sail over the valley beyond. It is but a step from the speeding auto to the flying airplane, from the sublime to the ridiculous; only the human miracle has left nothing ridiculous. In this suddenly born new age there is room for no such word.

IF YOU CHEATED ONCE, MAKE GOOD WHEN YOU PROSPER

As you look back you think of many little sharp deals you made by which you gained more than your share of the profits.

The persons you "squeeze" are in moderate, even close circumstances at the present time.

Why don't you take from your ample means and square up with them?

In a sense you victimized So and So and you ought to make good. You say he should know enough to keep out of a deal he does not understand thoroughly as I do; maybe you are right, but you saw he did not know how to protect his interests and you used his ignorance to your advantage.

Now you have more than you will ever use in your lifetime.

It ought to be a matter of comfort to you to be able to make restitution to the man who suffered financially through you.

Make restitution while you may for the undeserved good luck you have done. You might even make up for the deals which were entirely right but very unfair to the poor man who was caught in the [illegible] of your superior business sagacity!
